IN BRIEF

Harris Beach Murtha Adds New Chairman to Lead Management Committee

Thomas J. Garry, partner at Harris Beach Murtha, is the new chairman of the firm's management committee, the law office announced Wednesday.

Thomas J. Garry

Garry will work with Harris Beach CEO Chris Jagel to execute and implement the firm's growth strategy on the heels of two recent mergers, the law firm said. A 2025 combination of Harris Beach and Murtha Cullina and the recent addition of the Boston-based Peabody & Arnold will position the firm to better serve clients navigating "increasingly complex legal, regulatory and business challenges," he told Law.com.

"Clients will benefit from broader resources, deeper industry experience and expanded capabilities across Harris Beach Murtha," Garry said.

The Peabody & Arnold addition will expand Harris Beach's practice areas, he said. The Boston-based firm brings transactional and management liability coverage practices, deep experience navigating insurance coverage disputes, and professional liability defense to Harris Beach. The addition will also supplement Harris Beach's services in a number of areas, including labor and employment, medical and life sciences, health care and long-term care, and business litigation, as well as products liability and mass torts, he said.

Garry said the move is in line with the firm's priority of growing its capabilities to strengthen its platform and providing expanded capabilities to its clients. The firm's development priorities also provide its attorneys with opportunities to grow and build their careers, he added.

"What attracts attorneys, groups and firms to Harris Beach Murtha is the breadth of its capabilities, the strength of its platform and its collaborative culture," Garry said. "Attorneys are drawn to an environment where they can work with talented professionals, build strong relationships and grow their practices."

Garry currently serves as managing partner of Harris Beach's Long Island office in Uniondale, where he supervises day-to-day operations and the work of more than 40 attorneys and professional staff. He also supports multiple committees, including as the chair of the New York Appellate Division Second Department Judicial Screening Committee after an appointment by Gov. Kathy Hochul. He is a member of the New York State Judicial Screening Committee and is law chair of the New York State Democratic Committee.

His experience in election law has also led him to serve as New York state counsel for each of the past four Democratic nominees for president, and serve as an elector for New York in the 2020 and 2024 presidential elections. He said the firm's robust political law practice works across many facets of the area, including election law, lobbying compliance and campaign finance. With the upcoming November midterm election, he said Harris Beach will represent a number of candidates and companies navigating the world of campaign finance on both the state and federal levels.

"There is an expectation of extensive, highly-charged political activity this cycle, and we expect clients will need help navigating this process," Garry told Law.com "We stand ready to assist clients in this highly regulated landscape."

Garry said the opportunity to drive the firm's growth drew him to the chairman role, as Harris Beach grows to more than 300 attorneys across 19 offices and nearly 40 practice areas with the Peabody & Arnold addition. The firm intends to strengthen and continue its presence as a legal leader in the Northeast, he told Law.com.

"What excites me most is the opportunity to help sustain that momentum while honoring the firm's 170-year leg- » Page 4

Van Leeuwen Wins $23.8M After Judge Finds Rival Copied Ice Cream Packaging

BY BRIANA WARSING

VAN LEEUWEN Ice Cream won nearly $24 million in profits and an order requiring rival Rebel Creamery to redesign its packaging after an Eastern District judge found that Rebel intentionally copied the Brooklyn company's pastel, minimalist pint design.

COURT EXHIBIT

The ruling requires Rebel Creamery to redesign its pints and protects Van Leeuwen's unregistered combination of pastel colors, black script and minimalist packaging.

U.S. District Judge Eric Komitee found after a bench trial that Rebel infringed Van Leeuwen's trade dress under the Lanham Act and New York law. He awarded Van Leeuwen $23.785 million of Rebel's profits and permanently barred Rebel from selling ice cream in packaging likely to be confused with Van Leeuwen's.

"The evidence at that trial left no doubt that Rebel infringed and diluted Van Leeuwen's trade dress and did so intentionally," Komitee wrote in the July 16 decision.

Van Leeuwen is represented by Susman Godfrey and Chiesa Shahinian & Giantomasi. Rebel is represented by Holland & Hart, Moses & Singer and Robins Kaplan.

Elisha Barron of Susman Godfrey, who represents Van Leeuwen, said the ruling vindicated the company's investment in its distinctive packaging.

'Unheard Of': Chief Judge's Nominee Is Rebuffed Amid Delay In Forming Mamdani's Judiciary Committee

BY EMILY SAUL

THE MAYOR'S Advisory Committee on the Judiciary remains nonexistent seven months into New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani's first term, despite pending nominations for the committee members, Law.com has learned.

Mamdani named longtime ally and former campaign lawyer Ali Najmi as chair of the committee in January, but since has not officially appointed any new members, multiple sources said. Members are nominated by court officials and law school deans to sit on the committee, which vets and recommends candidates to sit as judges in one third of the city's courts.

Meanwhile, sources told Law.com that City Hall in April rebuffed one nomination to the committee made by New York State Chief Judge Rowan Wilson, a move one observer described as "unheard of."

"The nomination process has always been considered perfunctory or pro forma," said a former judge who asked that their name not be used.

City Hall did not immediately return a request for comment.

The lack of any committee was first reported on Saturday in a New York Daily News editorial authored by attorney Christian Browne and confirmed by Law.com. That op-ed came a day after Law.com reported that the Committee's » Page 4

US Growth Is More Tempting—And Challenging—Than Ever For UK-Founded Firms

BY RYAN HARROFF AND PATRICK SMITH

U.S. PARTNER exits at Clifford Chance over the past year highlight a broader challenge that the firm, as well as its U.K.-founded peers, continue to experience on this side of the Atlantic.

$25–30M
Top pay for star partners at leading U.S. firms.

Up to $20M
Top partner pay at several UK-founded firms.

The struggle to hold onto some top U.S. partners, the differences in pay scales between the U.S. and other markets, and tension within partnerships over U.S. compensation levels are persistent challenges for such firms, according to interviews with several market sources.

U.K.-founded firms have expanded in fits and starts over the past few decades in the U.S. But some U.S. departures at those firms may be accelerating because the talent market has become more fierce—as New York dealmaker compensation soars to more than $20 million—and amid a growing profitability gap between top-earning U.S. firms and everyone else, sources say.

"It's a real wake-up call," said Matthew Bersani, founding partner of the Cliff Group recruiting firm. Is U.K. firm growth sustainable, he said, "given the fact that U.S. firms can appear to be able to pick people off?"

U.K.-founded firms also face more competition because more firms are aggressive in their own lateral hiring in New » Page 7

DOJ's Extensive Subpoenas To 14 Law Firms Revealed

BY ABIGAIL ADCOX

THE JUSTICE Department has unveiled the subpoenas it sent out to 14 law firms, including firms that reached deals with President Donald Trump and firms targeted by an executive order or presidential memo. The subpoenas broadly demand any messages, communications and information related to Trump's law firm EOs and deals, as part of a discovery request that is much more extensive than previously believed.

Originally issued on July 1, the DOJ's subpoenas requested 14 law firms, including Covington & Burling, to respond to its subpoena for communications by a date last week—July 16. The DOJ also subpoenaed the leaders of all 14 firms to appear for deposition on Monday, Aug. 3, according to copies of the subpoenas filed in court on Friday. The subpoenas were issued amid a discovery battle between the DOJ and the American Bar Association.

It's not immediately clear whether any of the 14 law firms have responded to the subpoenas. The 14 firms and the DOJ did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

The subpoenas requested an extensive amount of information from the law firms related to their communications with Trump's personal senior counsel, Boris Epshteyn, as well as » Page 6

DOJ Wants to Disqualify Susman Godfrey from ABA Suit

BY BRENDA SAPINO JEFFREYS

THE TRUMP administration is seeking to disqualify Houston trial firm Susman Godfrey as counsel for the American Bar Association in the bar group's lawsuit alleging the administration has intimidated law firms for constitutionally protected activities.

In a motion filed Friday in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, the government alleges that Susman Godfrey cannot advocate for the ABA and also serve as a fact witness under Rule 3.7 of the D.C. Rules of Professional Conduct.

"That rule—and even the ABA's own Model Rule 3.7—contains a bright-line rule prohibiting a lawyer from serving as both advocate and fact witness in the same matter with narrow exceptions, which do not apply here," the Department of Justice alleges in the motion.

Besides serving as counsel to the ABA, Susman Godfrey has litigated against the government in its own executive order litigation, after President Trump hit the trial firm with an EO last year.

The DOJ asserts Susman Godfrey is a "central player—and fact witness" in the ABA suit and other suits involving "interactions" between the Trump administration and certain law firms.

"Disqualification is in order," the government claims.

In an order on Saturday, U.S. District Judge Amir Ali asked the ABA to file a reply by July 27.

Vineet Bhatia and Kalpana Srinivasan, co-managing partners of Susman Godfrey, did not immediately respond on Sunday to a request for a comment on the disqualification motion.

WIKIPEDIA/CC

Boris Epshteyn, Donald Trump's personal counsel

The disqualification effort is the latest battle in *the American Bar Association v. Executive Office of the Presiden*t.

The ABA is attempting to subpoena Boris Epshteyn, Trump's personal counsel, over his reported role in coordinating deals the administration struck in 2025 with several law firms.

Around the same time in 2025 that nine firms struck deals with the administration, President Trump hit several other firms—including Susman Godfrey—with executive orders imposing penalties that would restrict the firms' ability to do business. Each firm sued over the orders, won permanent injunctions against enforcement of penalties, and the administration has appealed.

Meanwhile, the DOJ responded to the ABA's subpoena of Epshteyn by trying to quash it and claimed that the ABA would need to exhaust other avenues of "non-privileged discovery" before subpoenaing an unnamed third party described as "widely known to be an adviser and counsel to the President," presumably referring to Epshteyn. The DOJ then suggested, in its motion to quash the subpoena, that the ABA subpoena the 13 law firms to get their desired information.

The ABA has filed a motion to compel the DOJ to respond to their subpoena of Epshteyn.

The DOJ's subpoena to 13 law firms is said to ask the firms for similar information as what the ABA requested from the DOJ, as part of a strategy by the Trump administration to apply pressure against the ABA or push back on its discovery requests in the litigation. Judge Ali has not yet ruled on DOJ's motion to quash the ABA's subpoenas, or the ABA's competing motion to compel.

In Friday's motion to disqualify Susman Godfrey, the DOJ alleges that despite Susman Godfrey's litigation against the government over the executive order targeting the firm, it "chose to represent the ABA in its own lawsuit challenging these executive orders and seeking similar injunction relief," and appears in the ABA's complaint as "part of the fact narrative and allegations, not as counsel" at least 50 times.

"This is the textbook case where the rules of professional conduct prohibiting a lawyer from serving as both advocate and witness must apply," the government wrote in the motion.

Katten, Ex-Partner Hit With $100M Legal Malpractice Suit Over Trust Mismanagement

BY JOHN CAMPISI
DUPAGE COUNTY, ILLINOIS

A NEW complaint lodged Friday in Illinois State Court against Katten Muchin Rosenman and former partner Matthew Sperry alleges that the firm and lawyer committed legal malpractice in a case involving a family trust worth over $100 million.

The lawsuit, filed in the 18th Judicial Circuit Court in Dupage County, Illinois, by trustee NorthSea LLC and other related entities claims that Katten was retained to protect the spouse and children—including one special needs child—of a family trust but instead drafted trust documents that stripped the beneficiaries of their rights without notice or consent.

The law firm and Sperry—who is currently a partner at Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pitman—are also accused of failing to advise on insider conflicts and enabling the looting of the multi-million-dollar family trust.

COURTESY PHOTO

Matthew Sperry

"Defendant's loyalty and fiduciary duty was to the trust beneficiaries, yet it blindly assisted and facilitated the wrongdoers at every step in a multiyear process without contacting the principals of the Trustee, or family beneficiaries or the grantor," states the lawsuit, filed by Gary A. Grasso of Illinois firm Grasso Law.

"Defendant should have prevented control to be unified into a single person who then held every lever to loot the trust."

The lead plaintiff, NorthSea LLC, served as trustee of the Petro Carta Trust. The other named plaintiffs are Prairie Private Trust Co., Green Sapphire Holdings Inc., Pradera PTC LLC and several individual trust beneficiaries.

The lawsuit essentially alleges that Katten and Sperry failed to protect the interests of the beneficiaries of the Petro Carta Trust, which was created under Cayman Islands law.

The trust was designed to protect the family's immense wealth. It was valued at more than $100 million.

From 2017 to 2024, Katten, through Sperry, served as manager of the trustee while owing fiduciary duties to the beneficiaries under Cayman Islands law.

Sperry, in May 2021, drafted migration documents from Pradera to NorthSea, but he never obtained the Cayman law review the migration action required, leading to problems with regard to how the trust was governed and administered, the complaint states.

Sperry left Katten in September to establish a U.K. private wealth practice at Cadwalader Wickersham & Taft but moved on to Pillsbury in advance of Cadwalader's merger with Hogan Lovells. He could not be reached for comment at his new firm.

Asked to comment on the lawsuit, a Katten spokesperson issued the following statement: "We've reviewed the complaint. The allegations are without merit, and we intend to defend the case vigorously. Because this matter is pending before the court, we can't comment further."

The suit goes on to state that the trust's migration bypassed the protector, or the trust's principal independent check. It also accuses Katten and Sperry of failing to know how a Cayman discretionary trust can operate.

"Katten drafted a rewrite that stripped the very protections … that had been designed to alert a beneficiary to what is happening and thereby hold the trustee to account," the suit states. "Katten removing them cleared the path for the concentrated control and the transactions that followed and did so without telling defendants' clients and the persons, including a special needs client, the trust was created to provide for and protect with the family's wealth."

The complaint says a competent attorney was required to advise the trustee that the living beneficiaries had to receive full disclosure of any enhancements to the trust, and had to give their informed, written consent before any changes could be made, all of which were not done in this case.

"Katten neither advised that consent was required nor obtained it," the suit states. "The beneficiaries were never asked and were never told there was anything to approve."

The plaintiffs claim that Katten's financial interest in the matter stood in direct conflict with the interests of the beneficiaries.

"A reasonably competent attorney was required to disclose a conflict of that kind and does not proceed without informed consent," the complaint reads. "Katten disclosed nothing."

The lawsuit claims that Katten "drafted the instruments that enriched the insiders who were paying it," and did so without telling the beneficiaries that their rights were being reduced.

The "machinery" Katten then built and maintained—including an insider-controlled trustee, accounting, disclosure and holding an asset company under one person's control—was then "foreseeably used to strip the PCTrust's assets."

The suit claims that the beneficiaries were never notified of the migration of the trust, the restatement or the transactions that stripped the assets.

The lawsuit contains counts of legal malpractice and breach of duty. The plaintiffs seek no less than $100 million in damages.

After Disqualifying Beasley Allen, Johnson & Johnson Sets Sights on Other Talc Lawyers

BY AMANDA BRONSTAD

AFTER getting Beasley Allen disqualified from talcum powder lawsuits in state courts across the nation, Johnson & Johnson now wants a federal judge to allow discovery into other lawyers, citing "concerning and newly developed facts" during testimony at a hearing earlier this month in Florida.

At issue is a former partnership between Beasley Allen's Andy Birchfield and James Conlan, previously at Faegre Drinker Biddle & Reath, to propose a $19 billion talc settlement with Johnson & Johnson in 2023. Conlan previously advised Johnson & Johnson on resolving thousands of talc lawsuits but, in 2022, left Faegre to create his own company, Legacy Liability Solutions. According to Johnson & Johnson, Birchfield violated the rules of professional conduct by partnering with Conlan, a lawyer who was, at one point, adverse to him.

But it wasn't just Beasley Allen working with Conlan, Johnson & Johnson lawyer Kristen Fournier, a New York partner at Kirkland & Ellis, wrote in a July 9 letter to U.S. Magistrate Judge Rukhsanah Singh in the talc multidistrict litigation in the District of New Jersey. She referenced "concerning and newly developed facts" that surfaced during a July 6 evidentiary hearing in Florida.

"At the hearing, defendants learned for the first time that other plaintiffs' lawyers, as well as David Molton of Brown Rudnick (the attorney who served as lead counsel to the plaintiffs' steering committee in both the LTL and LLT bankruptcies), participated in the illicit collaboration with Mr. Conlan and Beasley Allen," she wrote.

She asked for the matter to be addressed at an Aug. 3 status conference.

The plaintiffs' steering committee in the talc multidistrict litigation has not yet responded to Johnson & Johnson's letter in court. Michelle Parfitt, of Ashcraft & Gerel in Washington, D.C., who is lead counsel, declined to comment.

Molton, who is chairman of the cross-border, mass tort and restructuring litigation at Brown Rudnick in New York, did not respond to a request for comment.

On July 9, Broward County Circuit Court Judge Jeffrey Levenson, three days after the evidentiary hearing, granted Johnson & Johnson's motion to disqualify Beasley Allen from a case alleging its baby powder caused ovarian cancer in three women.

"Here, Conlan's prior defense representation and his subsequent plaintiffs'-side collaboration concerned the identical body of nationwide talcum powder litigation and the same core objective: the strategic resolution of J&J's talc liabilities," he wrote. "Conlan's former representation of J&J triggers an irrefutable presumption that he acquired confidences, and his subsequent collaboration with Beasley Allen directly targeted the same talcum powder litigation and interests materially adverse to J&J."

Beasley Allen lawyer Leigh O'Dell, in an email to Law.com, said her firm plans to appeal the decision "immediately." She called Johnson & Johnson's disqualification motions part of an "aggressive litigation tactic targeting the lawyers."

Another ovarian cancer case in Broward County Circuit Court is set to begin Aug. 3 before a different judge, she wrote.

"We look forward to presenting evidence that Johnson & Johnson sold talcum powder it knew was contaminated with asbestos to tens of thousands of women, many of whom developed ovarian cancer," she wrote. "Ms. Sarah Ortiz suffered and died needlessly, and we count it a privilege to represent her husband, Massimo Mancuso, to seek justice on her behalf."

'He Met With Many Different Plaintiff Lawyers, Correct?'

In 2024, Atlantic County Superior Court Judge John Porto sided with Beasley Allen, but the New Jersey Appellate Division, in an opinion on Feb. 6 of this year, reversed that decision, prompting a new wave of disqualification motions from Johnson & Johnson. On March 26, Singh, who sat with Porto during his own evidentiary hearing, disqualified Beasley Allen from the talc multidistrict litigation, where O'Dell had served as co-lead counsel with Parfitt in charge of more than 6,700 cases.

O'Dell noted that other courts had sided with Beasley Allen.

"We would remind everyone that other courts—the JCCP court in California, and a state court in Georgia—reviewed these very same facts and evidence and reviewed the very same complaint from Johnson & Johnson," O'Dell wrote. "Those courts ruled in our favor. In nearly all of the cases where courts have ruled against Beasley Allen, the matter is on appeal, where we feel confident that the law dictates that the decisions be reversed."

On April 10, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Theresa Traber denied Johnson & Johnson's disqualification motion, which was brought after the first bellwether trial—a move she concluded was done for an "improper tactical purpose." The first trial California's Judicial Council Coordinated Proceedings, or JCCP—had ended on Dec. 12 with a $40 million verdict against Johnson & Johnson for two women who were diagnosed with ovarian cancer. The second trial, involving the family members of four women who died of ovarian cancer, ended on June 5 with a defense verdict.

In Georgia, Fulton County State Court Judge Jane Morrison denied Johnson & Johnson's motion to revoke the pro hac vice admissions of O'Dell and three other Beasley Allen lawyers: Ted Meadows and Ryan Beattie in Montgomery, Alabama, and David Dearing in Atlanta. In a June 25 decision, she wrote that Johnson & Johnson had waived its right to such an "extraordinary request" based on conduct dating back to 2023.

"In this regard, nearly 900 days have lapsed between when defendants learned of the potentially disqualifying conduct and the date they sought relief," she wrote.

On Thursday, she denied Johnson & Johnson's reconsideration of that motion.

Levenson now joins judges in state courts in Pennsylvania and Illinois who have disqualified Beasley Allen from talc cases, or revoked the pro hac vice admissions of its lawyers, due to its prior partnership with Conlan.

Levenson considered all the other decisions involving Beasley Allen in talc cases and concluded that the California ruling was "entirely distinguishable."

"Allowing a law firm to circumvent its ethical obligations by routing a former opposing counsel's proprietary knowledge through an outside consulting entity would render these rules toothless and severely undermine public confidence in the integrity of the legal profession," he wrote.

He also held own evidentiary hearing, during which Birchfield, in Montgomery, and Johnson & Johnson's Worldwide Vice President of Litigation Erik Haas both testified, as did Barnes & Thornburg's Jim Murdica, in Chicago, who is lead resolution counsel for Johnson & Johnson.

During that testimony, Haas continued to emphasize that Conlan played a "central and pivotal" role in coordinating Johnson & Johnson's talc litigation, particularly after the first bankruptcy in 2021. He also said he was "shocked and appalled" upon discovering that Conlan, in 2023, was working with Beasley Allen on an alternative proposal to resolve the talc lawsuits.

"Just quite frankly, we were blown away by this," Haas said, according to a transcript of the evidentiary hearing. "When I saw this, that Mr. Conlan, our former counsel, is coordinating with our adversary on a proposal that was contrary to what I had just indicated was our goal, to pursue a bankruptcy solution, it, quite frankly, was dumbfounding to us."

Plaintiffs' lawyer John Uustal of Kelley Uustal in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, when cross-examining Haas, asked him who had introduced Conlan to Birchfield.

"He met with the mediators. He met with many different plaintiff lawyers, correct?" Uustal asked Haas, according to the transcript.

Haas replied, "At the time I had no knowledge of what Mr. Conlan was doing because he didn't disclose it to me, he didn't come to me and ask me for my consent, and he didn't seek a waiver."

Uustal later asked, "How many other plaintiff law firms did you move to disqualify, » Page 8

Delaware Court Rules SEC Disgorgement Is Not a Penalty or Uninsurable

In 2021, the New York State Court of Appeals issued a ruling in favor of Bear Stearns in which it rejected the First Department's view that SEC-ordered disgorgement necessarily constitutes an uninsurable penalty. J.P. Morgan Securities, Inc. v. Vigilant Insurance Company, 37 N.Y.3d 552 (Nov. 23, 2021).

That decision was the last in a series of rulings issued by the trial court, the First Department and the Court of Appeals, discussed in several of our previous columns. Those courts explored Bear Stearn's right to coverage for a portion of the loss incurred to settle an SEC proceeding alleging prohibited late trading and market timing practices.

Earlier this spring, the Superior Court of the State of Delaware addressed a similar dispute and cited the Court of Appeals' ruling with approval, finding that SEC disgorgement was not excluded as a penalty nor uninsurable under Delaware law with regard to the insurance claim and contract at issue. Clear Channel Outdoor Holdings, Inc. v. Illinois National Insurance Company, et al, No. N24C-02-208, 2026 WL 1347392 (Del. Super. Ct. April 28, 2026).

By Theodore A. Keyes

The Clear Channel Case

In 2018, Clear Channel Outdoor Holdings (Clear Channel) voluntarily disclosed to the SEC the results of an internal investigation that had revealed misappropriation of funds by the employees of its Chinese subsidiary as well as certain financial irregularities that potentially implicated the anti-bribery, internal controls and books and records provisions of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA).

The SEC investigation that followed determined that Clear Channel had violated the FCPA and Clear Channel negotiated a settlement with the SEC to resolve its liability. According to the SEC order that implemented the settlement, Clear Channel agreed to pay $16.5 million in disgorgement, $3.76 million in prejudgment interest and a $6 million civil monetary penalty.

Clear Channel acknowledged that the $6 million civil monetary penalty was subject to a policy exclusion but sought coverage from its insurers for the $16.5 million disgorgement payment and the $3.76 million in prejudgment interest.

After the primary insurer refused its demand, Clear Channel filed a lawsuit against the primary carrier and several excess insurers. The claims against the excess insurers were resolved via settlement leaving the primary carrier as the only defendant.

> The defendant insurer also contended that the disgorgement payment was uninsurable as a matter of law because it was against public policy to insure such disgorgement payments.

The Insurance Dispute

The coverage dispute was addressed by the Delaware trial court on cross-motions for summary judgment. The defendant insurer argued that Clear Channel was not entitled to coverage for the disgorgement payment or the prejudgment interest, relying on two carveouts to the policy definition of loss.

First, the Loss definition provided that Loss did not include "civil... penalties imposed by law." Second, the Loss definition expressly carved out "matters which may be uninsurable under the law pursuant to which the policy may be construed." Clear Channel Outdoor Holdings, 2026 WL 1347392 at *7.

As a threshold matter, the court explained that, even though the carveouts were located within the policy definitions, since they operate as exclusions, the insurer bears the burden of proving the carveouts are applicable. The court referred to these provisions as the "Civil Penalties Exclusion" and the "Uninsurability Exclusion."

The Civil Penalties Exclusion

The issue presented with respect to the Civil Penalties Exclusion was whether the disgorgement payment made by Clear Channel pursuant to the SEC settlement constituted a penalty. The court noted that in enforcement proceedings like the one at issue, the SEC may seek two types of remedies—disgorgement and civil penalties—and the securities laws differentiate between "civil penalties, on the one hand, and equitable relief or disgorgement, on the other."

The court explained that the natural reading of the Civil Penalties Exclusion was that it barred actual civil penalties but not disgorgement, because disgorgement is not mentioned in the exclusion.

Further, the court pointed out that a separate policy exclusion barred coverage for loss "arising out of, based upon or attributable to any... remuneration, personal profit or other financial advantage to which the Insured was not legally entitled," but that separate exclusion only barred coverage where the conduct was established by a final, non-appealable adjudication.

Thus, the court determined that, pursuant to the plain language of the policy, civil penalties were excluded, but disgorgement was not excluded in the absence of a final non-appealable adjudication—and because of the SEC settlement, there was no final adjudication as to Clear Channel's conduct. Consequently, the court held that, "[r]ead as whole, the [p]olicy covers SEC settlements for disgorgement and excludes them only for civil monetary payments."

Unlocking American Discovery for Foreign Cases: Primer on Section 1782

For foreign litigants and their counsel, a law in the United States known colloquially as "Section 1782" (28 U.S.C. §1782) offers both an opportunity and a challenge. Section 1782 allows parties to existing or contemplated foreign proceedings—or other persons with an interest in those proceedings—to obtain evidence located in the United States.

Applicants may seek documents, witness testimony, and other forms of discovery for use in the foreign proceeding. It offers foreign litigants access to the relatively broad discovery afforded in the United States for use in foreign proceedings, where discovery may be limited.

Here, we examine how Section 1782 applications work, courts' considerations when deciding whether to grant them, and strategies for opposing them.

What Is Section 1782?

Section 1782 permits a U.S. federal court to order discovery "for use" in a proceeding before a foreign or international tribunal upon application from an interested person (an applicant) or pursuant to a letter rogatory or request issued by the foreign tribunal.

For instance, an applicant might seek documents from U.S. companies or individuals, or testimony from someone residing in the United States.

This can be significant to the applicant or tribunal because U.S. discovery is often much broader than discovery in other jurisdictions, and the applicant may be able to obtain information under Section 1782 that they could not obtain under their own country's law.

Minimum Requirements

Before a court will consider granting discovery under Section 1782, the Applicant must meet three statutory requirements:

1) The target of the discovery "resides" or is "found" in the U.S. district where the application is filed.

JASON P. HIPP is a partner at Foley Hoag.

By Jason P. Hipp

Tip: Individuals who reside in the district and entities with their headquarters in the district or incorporated in the U.S. state in which the district sits will satisfy this requirement. For instance, many financial institutions and global companies with Manhattan offices "reside" in the Southern District of New York.

2) The discovery is "for use" in a proceeding before a foreign or international tribunal.

> Even if the statutory requirements are met, courts are not obligated to grant a Section 1782 application, and have broad discretion to grant, deny, or narrow the scope of the discovery sought.

Tip: This is often the most disputed factor—especially if the foreign proceeding has not yet started or if the claims have been previously rejected by a foreign tribunal. Courts generally require some objective indication that the discovery will be relevant to a reasonably contemplated foreign proceeding.

3) The request is made by a foreign tribunal itself or by any "interested person."

Tip: Litigants, prospective litigants, and complainants/victims in criminal cases qualify as an "interested person," but the interested party need not be a direct participant in the action. For instance, a creditor of a company in a foreign bankruptcy proceeding or a nonparty shareholder of a company involved in a foreign derivative suit could also qualify.

Courts' Discretionary Considerations

Even if the statutory requirements are met, courts are not obligated to grant a Section 1782 application, and have broad discretion to grant, deny, or narrow the scope of the discovery sought.

They consider four "Intel factors" (named after the U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring them) to guide courts' discretion. See Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 244–45 (2004).

1. Whether the person from whom discovery is sought is a participant in the foreign litigation. If the target of discovery is a party in the foreign proceeding, Section 1782 may not be necessary.

2. Whether the foreign government, court, or agency would be receptive to assistance from a U.S. federal court. If the foreign court is likely to disregard evidence uncovered in the United States, such as because the foreign jurisdiction has a blocking statute prohibiting the introduction of foreign evidence, the discovery may not be worth the burden imposed on the U.S. discovery target.

3. Avoiding Circumvention of Proof-Gathering Restrictions. If the discovery sought is expressly foreclosed under foreign discovery limits or policies, courts are far less likely to grant discovery. For instance, a country's privacy laws may prohibit the gathering of certain types of evidence that would be permitted in the United States.

4. Unduly Intrusive or Burdensome Requests. Courts may deny or narrow requests that are overly broad or impose excessive burdens on the responding party.

Practical Tips for Navigating The U.S. Court's Discretionary Authority

Embrace the courts' wide discretion. Most applications are decided based on the

Paul Hastings Takes Paris Arbitration Team From White & Case

Paul Hastings is bringing in two international arbitration partners from White & Case in Paris, home to one of the world's busiest arbitration courts, as the firm looks to expand its international arbitration and complex litigation practices.

Partners Elizabeth Oger-Gross and Tolu Obamuroh, the first arbitration partners in Paul Hastings' Paris office, will be joined by a "substantial team" of attorneys in Paris and London, coming from White & Case and another firm, Oger-Gross said in an interview.

Oger-Gross, a partner for 23 years at White & Case, reconnects with Jonathan Hamilton, Paul Hastings' Washington-based global co-chair of international arbitration, who came over from White & Case in March 2024 after 25 years there, including as head of Latin American arbitration.

"I have known him for years and it's just exciting to be joining an arbitration group that is already extremely strong with strong roots, but also that is expanding," said Oger-Cross.

Paul Hastings' website claims it has almost 500 global disputes lawyers across 24 offices worldwide, including dozens "with deep arbitration experience."

Paris is home to the International Chamber of Commerce Court of Arbitration, one of the world's busiest arbitration hubs. "The addition of premier talent like Elizabeth and Tolu to our strong and growing international arbitration platform further accelerates the momentum we have gained in transforming our elite litigation practice in Europe and globally," said firm chair Frank Lopez in a statement.

A White & Case spokesperson confirmed the partners' departure in an email. "We wish them well in the future."

Obamuroh, who spent about nine years at White & Case, including seven months as a partner, had a two-year stint at the Lagos Court of Arbitration as associate general counsel, according to his LinkedIn profile.

The two partners advise sovereign states and corporate entities, particularly in the energy, infrastructure, and construction industries, on complex international commercial and investment disputes, Paul Hastings said in statement.

Oger-Gross has acted as lead adviser in large-scale international arbitration and litigation across Europe, the Middle East, Africa and the Americas, advising an African State in two ICC arbitrations stemming from a multibillion-dollar hydropower project, as well as water- and energy- sector disputes. She acts in both English and French-language arbitrations and sits as arbitrator.

Obamuroh has advised on ICC and International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes on arbitrations relating to African disputes in the construction, energy and mining sectors.

Paul Hastings is ranked 22nd in the 2026 Am Law 200, with $2.7 billion in gross revenues, average profit per equity partner of $8.3 million and some 1272 attorneys worldwide. White & Case, which has revenues of $3.6 billion and 2,643 attorneys, has PEP of $4.4 million.

Paul Hastings has made several recent hires from White & Case, including partner Xavier Petet in 2025 in Paris, in an expansion of its global energy and infrastructure practice that also included a corporate finance partner in Abu Dhabi.

In another Paris arbitration hire, in May Hogan Lovells, ahead of its July 1 merger with Cadwalader Wickersham & Taft, hired Hughes Hubbard & Reed's head of arbitration for Europe, Africa and the Middle East in Paris, Sébastien Bonnard.

Combination With IP Boutique Gives Lathrop GPM Offices in NYC and London

Lathrop GPM announced Monday that it is combining with IP boutique HG Law, expanding its presence in California and launching new offices in New York and London.

The combination, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2027, will add 27 attorneys and 23 patent agents and technical advisers to Lathrop GPM, the No. 154 firm in the most recent Am Law 200 rankings. The firm estimates the combination will bump up revenue to $300 million, a $40 million increase from its fiscal year 2025 results.

"It's really about three things for us, when we're looking for growth opportunities like this. We look for folks that share our culture, who will help us improve in our high-value differentiator practices, and folks who can help us grow in markets that are high demand markets for clients," said Lathrop GPM managing partner Cameron Garrison "At the end of the day anything like this has to be client-driven and aligned on culture to be successful. All of that came into play for us."

As part of the combination, Lathrop GPM partner James Velema will lead the combined firm's IP practice group and collaborate with director of practice management Kate Tompkins. Alexander Shvarts, from the San Jose office of legacy HG Law, will head up the engineering subspeciality in the IP group, while New York-based HG Law partner Joseph McPartland will be leading the media practice. HG Law managing committee member Gregory Lundell, who is also in San Jose, will be part of Lathrop GPM's executive committee.

"Any time we do a combination like this, we'll always find opportunities for others to step in on key firm committees and task forces. It's a big part of integrating effectively, making sure we're helping lead things together," Garrison said.

This is not Lathrop GPM's only strategic combination in recent years. In fall 2024, the firm merged with Northern California midsize firm Hopkins Carley, a combination that increased the firm's attorney head count by 25% and helped boost the firm's 2025 revenue over 31% from the prior year. Before that, legacy firms Lathrop Gage, based in Kansas City, and Gray Plant Mooty, based in Minneapolis, combined at the start of 2020 to form Lathrop GPM.

While mergers may play a key role as part of Lathrop GPM's growth strategy, Garrison noted that the firm still plans to grow organically as well as with laterals from other firms.

"We want to grow organically. It's reflective of our values and our culture—we pride ourselves in the professional development and organic growth we have within us. We're also looking to add laterally, like all firms," Garrison said. "The thing that combinations like this do for us is—as long as we make sure we're doing it with the right firms, the right people, and the right mix of practices and culture—it's a great opportunity to grow at a larger scale than with organic or lateral growth."

According to Lundell, the desire for scale played into HG Law's own decision to combine with Lathrop GPM.

"From our point of view, we've been running a global patent practice for clients seeking global protection, servicing our sophisticated engineering clients and making sure patents are a core part of their value and business, which is also why we have a London presence," Lundell explained. "That international feature makes us different, along with the way we protect those inventions. We were looking for a larger platform as it was an easier way to scale and invest and share what we do on a bigger scale."

"We represent similar client profiles, and once we started getting to know each other, it was uncanny how well we fit together," Lundell said.

According to Garrison, IP work is a key differentiator for Lathrop GPM, describing the firm as "a full service IP boutique within a full-service firm." As part of that differentiation, Lundell noted that technology and AI is virtually omnipresent across the corporate spectrum, and that his firm has been working with clients to protect their strategies, tools and software.

Cameron Garrison

Gregory Lundell

"In terms of the larger firm, today, every company, no matter where you're at, has to think about technology and what you're AI strategy is," Lundell emphasized.

"IP has been a big part of what we have done for at least a couple decades or more… this opportunity was a chance to strengthen that value proposition," Garrison added. "It positions us where we can offer the full range of IP services to all clients and can do that within a full-service firm. That's the best of both worlds."

Looking at both legacy firms' 2026 performance, both Garrison and Lundell noted that demand has been strong over the first half of the year. As such, both firms noted that they were combining from a position of strength in terms of client demand and revenue.

"In 2026, it feels like a pickup across the board. We started a couple of new workflows within the firm that have increasingly put people to work. We just went through our hiring cycle of hiring new junior people, so we didn't pause that, we expanded our hiring even knowing we're going into this combination," Lundell said. "That demand and pipeline has been really strong."

Garrison added that he expects Lathrop GPM's strong performance to continue into the second half, based on current client demand.

"From our standpoint, we've had a tremendous first six months. Demand is up, we're doing great on the revenue front, our clients are busy and that means they're asking us to help more and more," Garrison observed. "We're excited about where we are entering the second half of the year."

Keeping It Real: New York's 'Synthetic Performer' Law Takes the Stage

By Carla Varriale-Barker And Phillip Miller

New York recently amended General Business Law Section 396-b, requiring disclosure of "synthetic performers" used in advertising. A "synthetic performer" is defined as a "digitally created asset created, reproduced or modified by computer, using generative artificial intelligence (AI) or a software algorithm."

The synthetic performer is intended to give the impression that the asset is engaging in an audiovisual and/or visual performance of a human performer, although the synthetic performer is not recognizable as any identifiable natural performer. General Business Law Section 396-b applies to any person or entity that makes, publishes, circulates or places publicly any advertisements that contain "synthetic performers."

The disclosure obligation applies where the advertiser has actual knowledge that a synthetic performer appears in the advertisement. The law is of particular interest to the advertising, film and television industries and to the creators of commercial content.

Although the application of the synthetic performer law is a work in progress, it represents a step toward balancing the interests of consumers and creatives and the need to keep pace with rapidly evolving technological innovations. The advertising, film, and television industries should be aware of the contours of the first-of-its-kind synthetic performer law and how to avoid running afoul of it.

Who Is Subject To the Synthetic Performer Law?

New York's synthetic performer law applies to persons who produce or create an advertisement. "Advertisers" are defined as any person engaged in the business of dealing with any property or service who, for any commercial purpose, produces or creates an advertisement respecting any such property or service. It requires disclosure when the advertisement includes AI-generated synthetic performers. Advertisers must "conspicuously disclose" (although what constitutes "conspicuous" disclosure is not defined within the synthetic performer law) in that advertisement whether any synthetic performer was used.

However, the synthetic performer law does not apply to:

1. Advertisements or promotional materials for expressive works, including motion pictures, streaming content and others, provided the use of the synthetic performer in the advertisement is consistent with its use in the underlying expressive work;

2. Audio-only advertisements; and

3. The use of AI in advertisements solely for language translation of a human performer

The law contains a liability carve-out for publishers and platforms, including, but not limited to, newspapers, streaming services, and similar entities. Those publishers and platforms will not be held liable for publishing or posting advertisements that violate the law. However, liability remains with the producer or creator of the advertisement.

What Does 'Conspicuously Disclose' Mean?

Although the term "conspicuously disclose" is not defined, and the courts or the legislature will have to provide guidance later on, the synthetic performer law should be read in harmony with its stated purpose. The unmistakable objective of the disclosure is to help the general public recognize when an advertisement, in any form of media, uses what appears to be a human performer, although it is a synthetic performer generated by AI or a software algorithm instead.

Furthermore, "conspicuous" is synonymous with "apparent" or "noticeable." Logically, therefore, the required disclosure should be prominent and visible within the advertisement. Advertisers who produce an advertisement that uses a synthetic performer should ensure the disclosures are simple, honest, and prominent. A potential point of guidance can be found in 16 C.F.R. 255.0(f), which contains the Federal Trade Commission's definition of "clear and conspicuous." It is defined there as "a disclosure [that] is difficult to miss (i.e., easily noticeable) and easily understandable by ordinary consumers."

What Are the Potential Penalties for Violations of The Synthetic Performer Law?

The synthetic performer law carries civil penalties of:

- $1,000 for a first violation
- $5,000 for any subsequent violations

Protecting New York's Consumers and Talent, And Boosting Transparency

New York has a compelling interest in leading responsible innovation involving AI-driven content such as synthetic performers. Governor Hochul's rationale for enacting the synthetic performer law is straightforward and timely: it is intended to protect consumers and enhance transparency in advertising in the film and television industries.

Furthermore, New York's creative workforce is a unique part of its economy. The synthetic performer law puts New York's human performers in a better position to protect » Page 6 late into future scale.

This analysis projects the firm's future revenue trajectory using a statistical forecasting approach based on historical revenue data from Law.com Compass, drawing on performance from 2016–2025 to extend the firm's underlying growth trend through 2030.

The forecast includes a central projection, alongside upper and lower reference ranges that provide context by illustrating how future performance may vary. These ranges widen over time, reflecting the broader set of possible outcomes as the forecast horizon extends.

The analysis is based solely on past revenue patterns and does not incorporate assumptions about future law firm events, market shocks, or other structural changes that could materially alter a firm's revenue trajectory over the 2026–2030 period.

Projected Revenue Trajectory

The central projected revenue trend points to sustained growth, with revenue expected to approach nearly $19B by 2030, assuming the firm's growth trajectory remains broadly intact over the forecast period. This central trajectory alone highlights the firm's potential future scale, even before taking more optimistic upside scenarios into account.

Against this backdrop, the upper projected range captures the potential for above trend performance, reflecting exceptional scenarios where demand strengthens materially or core practices significantly outperform the central projection. In the upside scenario, revenue could potentially approach $24B by 2030, illustrating the upper end of the plausible range and highlighting the level of outperformance that remains possible under the most favorable operating conditions.

The lower projected range, meanwhile, reflects a downside outcome, capturing scenarios in which performance eases materially or falls short of recent momentum. Even under these much softer conditions, the projection continues to indicate meaningful expansion, with revenue expected to be around $13.7B by 2030.

Viewed together, the upper and lower ranges provide context around the central projection, illustrating the scale of potential upside and downside risk across the forecast horizon and helping frame how outcomes may vary around the underlying trend.

While the revenue range shown captures what is statistically plausible, exceptional years—driven by major wins, market shifts, or one-off events—can still push results outside the modelled bounds.

Leadership Takeaways

Some key takeaways from what this data means for your firm:

- Kirkland's potential future size carries implications for recruitment, pricing, and competitive dynamics. A larger platform and deeper financial base would give the firm even greater leverage in attracting and retaining elite talent, while increased economic strength would further support its ability to sustain premium rates and influence compensation expectations across the market.
- In the lateral market, the firm's increased scale has the potential to influence partner and team movements, shaping the flow of talent among firms operating in comparable spaces. Its prospective size and financial clout would accelerate its ability to act as a gravitational force, drawing in the highest performing talent.
- Such movements can disrupt existing talent pipelines, shift compensation expectations, and prompt reactive hiring strategies elsewhere, shaping how other firms plan, invest, and compete for future talent.
- As the firm grows, so does its competitive weight in winning major transactions and disputes, placing additional pressure on rivals aiming to compete for similar mandates. The result is a future competitive environment in which other firms must work harder to differentiate and refine their market positioning to remain in contention for the same caliber of work.

Taken together, the forecast highlights both the scale of Kirkland's potential growth and the breadth of outcomes the firm may experience in the years ahead. It offers law firm leaders a lens through which to understand the firm's potential trajectory and the strategic considerations it raises for peer firms and competitors.

Executive Director, Ayanna Sorett, had tendered her resignation.

There are currently at least 30 vacancies in criminal, family, and civil court that can only be filled by mayoral appointment, per sources. Under Mamdani's own Executive Order, he cannot appoint or reappoint any judges who have not been through the committee.

The same EO requires that judicial vacancies be filled "within 90 days, unless additional time is required to satisfy a public interest as determined by the Committee."

Wilson told Law.com he received a call from Najmi in April, informing the Chief Judge that his nomination of former Appellate Division, Second Department Justice John Leventhal "would not be approved."

Wilson said Najmi was poised to explain the decision, but that Wilson interjected and said Najmi need not explain the reasoning. Instead, Wilson told Law.com he said he would withdraw Leventhal's name from nomination and select someone else. Leventhal, now a partner at Aidala, Bertuna & Kamins, declined to comment.

"My bigger concern," the chief judge said, "is I sent a bunch of names over to them—some before that and one very quickly after that, and I haven't heard anything."

It is not unheard of for the committee to assemble in the summer or fall; under former Mayor Bill de Blasio, committee members weren't finalized until the summer of his first term and the full committee didn't meet until September, one insider said. Yet, the vacancies facing that committee were not as numerous as they are now, the person said. Former mayor Eric Adams announced his chair and named the entire committee in a press release issued four months after taking office.

But Mamdani announced Najmi as committee chair on his second day in office, prompting observers to speculate about the reasoning for the delay in forming the entire committee. Earlier this year, some accused the mayor of playing politics when he declined to re-appoint three judges approved by a prior committee.

Multiple judges sitting in criminal court told Law.com that vacancies have led to overcrowded dockets, which are forcing the judges to set long adjournment times in trial-ready cases.

In a statement released on Monday, New York City Trial Lawyers' Association President Ronald Minkoff called on the mayor to "revive" the committee.

"The resulting delays will have real world effects," Minkoff said. "As vacancies caused by judicial deaths, illnesses and retirements remain unfilled, judicial caseloads increase and backlogs grow. Pretrial detainees languish in prison; tenants challenging their landlords get no relief; and other types of civil disputes remain unresolved."

VIRTUAL LAWYERING

The Next Frontier of Legal Technology: From Workflow to Foresight

By Mark A. Berman | And Etia Rottman Frand

ADOBE STOCK

The dominant narrative around artificial intelligence in the legal profession has, understandably, focused on efficiency. Tools compress hours of research into minutes. Platforms review and summarize documents at a scale no associate team could match.

Drafting assistants reduce the friction of producing first versions of contracts, briefs, and correspondence. These are meaningful advances, and they are genuinely changing how legal work gets done.

But efficiency is a limited ambition. What AI does to the speed of legal work is great. But what it does to the scope of what lawyers can know, and when they can know it, is transformative.

The distinction matters because it describes a different relationship between lawyers and the information they have always utilized. The data that lawyers use has long existed: corporate disclosures, regulatory filings, litigation histories, industry patterns, and information received from clients.

None of it is new. What is new is the ability to synthesize it at scale and to surface the connections that were always present, but practically invisible. Analysis through artificial intelligence can inform how a case can be constructed, challenged, or even prevented.

This is what legal intelligence means. Its implications extend across the entire legal ecosystem, in ways that are worth examining carefully.

A Different Kind of Question

A distinction worth drawing is between two fundamentally different questions that legal technology can answer.

The first question is: how do we do this faster? That is the question that most legal AI is designed to answer: how to review documents faster; research precedent faster; and draft agreements faster. It is an important question, and the tools built around it for speed are improving legal practice in measurable ways.

> Concrete illustrations of this capability are instructive, because they suggest just how wide the gap is between what Legal Intelligence can detect and what traditional legal investigation may find.

The second question is: what don't we know yet, and why? That is the question that legal intelligence is designed to answer.

It assumes that the most consequential legal problems are not the ones sitting on your desk, but the ones that have not yet been identified: potential violations or breaches occurring at scale that are invisible because the evidence is scattered across too many sources, in too many formats, for any human team to synthesize. The challenge is not speed. It is signal detection.

In national security work, intelligence analysts have long operated on this second question. They do not wait for a threat to materialize before examining it. They scan intercepted communications, financial flows, travel patterns, and open-source signals simultaneously, looking for correlations that indicate a pattern before that pattern materializes into an event.

The analytical output is not a document summary. It is an assessment: this is what is happening, this is what it likely means, and this is what the data says about where it is likely to go.

Legal intelligence imports that methodology into law. The data sources, however, are different—regulatory filings, court dockets, corporate disclosures, health and safety records, industry patterns—but the underlying logic is the same: review large volumes of fragmented information, detect statistically significant patterns, and surface legally meaningful conclusions before they are otherwise visible.

What the Data Actually Reveals

Concrete illustrations of this capability are instructive, because they suggest just how wide the gap is between what legal

Legal Tops All Other Business Units in AI Use, Raising the Stakes For GC Oversight

BY TRUDY KNOCKLESS

CORPORATE legal departments have quietly become the biggest users of artificial intelligence in any given enterprise, embracing company-approved AI tools more aggressively than any other business function—and, in doing so, raising the stakes for how general counsel oversee the organization's most sensitive information.

New research from Harmonic Security, based on analysis of 1.9 million classified AI-session minutes across enterprise organizations, found legal and governance teams account for 19.5% of all AI use, ahead of go-to-market teams at 17.7%, design and development at 13.3%, strategy at 11.9% and people and talent at 10.4%.

For a profession often viewed as cautious about adopting new technology, the findings suggest legal has moved beyond experimentation. Instead, AI is becoming embedded in day-to-day work involving contracts, regulatory analysis, litigation strategy and intellectual property review—some of the most sensitive work performed inside a company.

Unlike many other business functions, legal is also largely avoiding what security professionals call "shadow AI." Harmonic found legal departments account for 32.3% of enterprise AI plan usage but only about 4% of activity on personal, free AI accounts. Go-to-market teams show the opposite pattern, generating 28.6% of free-account AI activity while representing just 10.1% of enterprise-plan use.

That distinction comes as the report found employees routinely conduct business work on personal AI accounts. Across all AI platforms studied, 74.6% of classified AI activity was business-related, while only 13.3% was personal. More than 60% of activity on every major free AI platform except Gemini Free was classified as business use, suggesting employees often default to whichever AI account is already open rather than the one provided by their employer.

Legal's preference for enterprise tools does not eliminate risk, however. Because lawyers handle contracts, privileged communications, regulatory advice and other highly confidential information—and because they use AI more than any other department—the legal function potentially represents the largest overall concentration of sensitive corporate information entering AI systems.

The report found ChatGPT dominates legal AI use, accounting for 67% of legal's AI hours, the largest department-tool concentration

Morgan & Morgan Establishes First AI Leadership Role With Amazon Engineer

BY VIVIENNE SERRET

PERSONAL injury giant Morgan & Morgan announced Tuesday that it had hired longtime Amazon technologist Kaushik Chakraborti as the firm's first chief AI officer, based in its Irvine, California office.

In this new role, the firm said Chakraborti will spearhead AI strategy, focusing on using cutting-edge technology to optimize operations, drive revenue growth and significantly enhance the client experience.

"At Morgan & Morgan, we pride ourselves on welcoming and adopting new technology, and we can all agree that AI is here to stay," John Morgan, Morgan & Morgan founder, said in a statement. "Bringing in Kaushik Chakraborti, who is at the absolute top of this field, will allow us to stay ahead of the curve and harness AI's full potential. This isn't about replacing the human expertise and exceptional legal representation we are known for but rather to empower our team to better serve our clients who need us most."

In terms of ensuring attorneys are using AI technology safely, Morgan & Morgan's chief transformation officer Yath Ithayakumar said in a statement that it "starts with education."

He noted that the firm has spent a significant amount of time developing proprietary systems in-house that standardize and scale its operations across the country.

Morgan & Morgan is among the multitude of firms that have run into trouble with lawyers filing briefs containing hallucinated case citations. In 2025, three of the firm's attorneys—including Michael Morgan, the son of firm founder John Morgan—were sanctioned by a Wyoming federal judge for including the false citations in a suit against Walmart.

Harvey Continues Acquisition Streak With Addition of Investment Platform Benchmark

BY ALEEZA FURMAN

LEGAL artificial intelligence startup Harvey announced Thursday that it acquired Benchmark, a New York-based, AI-powered platform for guiding investment decisions.

The deal, the financial terms of which were not disclosed, is Harvey's third acquisition of 2026. According to a press release, the addition of Benchmark is intended to build out Harvey's asset management business. Harvey currently works with 50 asset management firms across a range of deal-related workflows, the release said.

Benchmark is designed to provide investment firms with insights based on their institutional knowledge that can help steer their decision making. According to LinkedIn, the company was founded in 2022 and has around 10 employees. It has received funding from Y Combinator and the Outsiders Fund.

Benchmark's founders, Alec Dunn and Connor Janson, along with the rest of the company's staff, are set to join Harvey's product and engineering team.

Carl Fuda, vice president of partnerships and business development at Harvey, told Law.com that the asset management space represents a particularly fast-growing segment of Harvey's in-house customers, which already make up the most rapidly expanding part of company's business.

While Benchmark began with a focus on deal teams, Fuda said, it moved toward the legal space due to the overlap between the two industries.

But that does not mean Harvey is bringing on the platform with only legal customers in mind. As Harvey's customer base expands, Fuda said the kinds of professionals it serves is likely to as well—with the company already serving some PwC tax professionals.

"Legal will always be a very important segment, and the most important segment for us. We absolutely will expand from there," he said.

"We think about knowledge work pretty broadly," he added. "If you're handling documents, if you're combing through large volumes of unstructured data, like a PwC tax advisor might be doing, that is a potential adjacency we might we might consider beyond law."

The Benchmark acquisition builds on what has already been a year of significant growth for Harvey. While the company has received over $1 billion since its 2022 founding, it only began expanding via acquisitions this year, starting with its January acquisition of product demo startup Hexus. Less than two months later, in March, Harvey acquired AI-powered data integration platform Lume.

Amid all that acquisition activity, Harvey has also continued to rake in capital. In March, the company announced that it raised $200 million in a round led by venture capital firms GIC and Sequoia, representing only the latest in

What Law Firms Can Learn From AI Deployment

Editor's note: Hanson Bridgett recently announced the firm-wide deployment of Anthropic's Claude across its attorneys and professional staff.

By Laura Long And Brad Hise

The legal industry spent years asking whether artificial intelligence belonged in law firms. In 2026, that question is largely settled. The new question, "How do you implement AI successfully?" is harder. The firms that answer it thoughtfully will help set the standard for the profession. The ones that don't will spend years catching up.

One lesson learned from AI deployment projects is that implementation and adoption rarely happen at the same pace. As with any new tool or process introduced within an organization, questions arise, and adoption rates vary across practice groups and business teams. Litigation professionals had different use cases and priorities than members of the marketing, HR, finance, and IT departments. The variation was significant enough to shape how training, governance, and support needed to be approached across the organization.

The experience reiterated something we are already seeing in other organizations implementing AI. Change management, governance, and training are often the most critical components of an AI deployment plan. This hard work, governance, data security, training, oversight, and professional responsibility, needs to happen well in advance of putting these tools to work for clients and client matters.

It is incumbent on firms to create policies, set usage scenarios, and implement training and support so that all members within the firm understand the strengths and weaknesses of these technologies. People don't always embrace AI technology in the same manner.

Practice groups and business functions require different guidance and training, and proactively addressing these differences increases adoption and usefulness. As firms begin to embrace broad implementation, governance and change management become increasingly important.

Firms are already using gen AI in summary reports of depositions and client documents, for drafting routine communications, identifying document discrepancies, and identifying similar cases.

Members at all levels of firms use it for a variety of day-to-day business functions. Today, these applications are increasingly widespread. If used thoughtfully, gen AI will enable professionals to focus on tasks that require expertise, judgment, client relationships, and accountability.

That distinction is important because the value of these tools depends on a clear understanding of where technology ends, and professional responsibility begins.

Gen AI remains a tool. It is not the decision maker. It owes no duties to clients. It does not practice law. It does not exercise professional judgment. It does not bear responsibility for legal advice ultimately delivered to clients.

That responsibility rests with lawyers and other professionals.

That, in turn, makes governance imperative before any significant deployment.

Responsible deployment of gen AI includes policies, restrictions on client and confidential data, review processes, human oversight, collaboration among operations, IT, and risk management teams, and ongoing evaluation as technology evolves.

Training, a concern for many organizations today, requires significant attention. Users must be trained not only on specific use cases but also on how these tools fit into existing workflows. They need opportunities to ask questions, share experiences, and learn from others as adoption progresses. Without robust ongoing training, any technology's impact will be diminished.

Organizations should also be prepared to communicate clearly with clients about how these tools are being used and what safeguards are in place. Transparency helps reinforce trust and demonstrates a continued commitment to professional standards.

The legal industry also has a broader opportunity. AI literacy will become as important a professional skill as legal research, writing, and negotiation. Legal and business professionals who develop an understanding of AI and its capabilities and limitations will be better equipped to navigate technological change.

The firms that derive the greatest value from AI will not necessarily be those that move first. They will be the firms that invest in governance, training, and change management from the outset.

AI will become a feature of legal practice. Ensuring that adoption is responsible, reliable, ethical, and sustainable is one of the defining challenges facing the profession.

a letter to its 1,000-plus attorneys, cautioning that citing fabricated AI-generated cases could lead to disciplinary action, including termination.

"Training our attorneys on best practices, keeping them informed as AI evolves, and then backing that up with firmwide policies and real accountability measures," Ithayakumar said Tuesday about the firm's current education efforts. "Another piece is design. We develop and choose tools where safeguards are built into the workflow and where there is full transparency about where the information comes from."

Ithayakumar added that using the technology to optimize the firm's operations and client experience boils down to three things—transparency, understanding the workflow of its legal teams, and giving its teams the tools needed to make its best practices and case strategies easy to apply.

"When you get those three right, growth follows naturally," he said.

Chakraborti brings more than 25 years of experience building and scaling global technology organizations across digital commerce, insurance, healthcare and financial services.

He most recently spent nearly 12 years at Amazon in senior engineering leadership roles, where he integrated agentic AI and large language models into workflows and played a key role in launching Alexa+, Amazon's redesigned intelligent assistant, according to a news release.

His move to Morgan & Morgan was solidified by the firm's "top-down commitment to using cutting-edge technology to empower the firm to best serve its clients."

"After nearly 12 years at Amazon, I wanted my next chapter to focus on deploying AI where it has a direct, meaningful impact," Chakraborti said in a statement. "John Morgan and the leadership team made it clear their vision isn't about replacing human expertise but giving attorneys and staff the best possible tools to deliver justice faster, and to more people who need it. That was an opportunity I couldn't pass up."

their likenesses from being deceptively replaced by AI-generated performers because of the required disclosures. The disclosures should eradicate any confusion about the identity of a synthetic performer.

The synthetic performer law also protects consumers from being duped by what they believe are advertisements by "real" people. The law is in direct response to the proliferation of AI-generated synthetic performers across all forms of media, including social media and digital advertising.

Without clear notice that the content the public is viewing is not real, AI-generated synthetic performers and manipulated media can undermine a consumer's ability to separate fact from fiction. Therefore, the lack of disclosure could leave consumers more vulnerable to exploitation.

The synthetic performer law puts New York at the forefront of responsible innovation, balancing the need to harness technology with the desire to protect New York's consumers and creative workforce. It also breathes new life into the concept of truth in advertising. Although the "performers" may be fake, New York's objectives are genuine.

in the dataset. Claude accounted for 18%, followed by Microsoft Copilot at 9%, Google Gemini at 4% and Perplexity at 1%.

Harmonic also found that, regardless of which AI platform employees choose, the work they perform is remarkably similar. Nearly half of all business AI activity centers on efficiency and automation, followed by risk and compliance and decision support. That suggests governance efforts focused on blocking or approving individual AI tools may be less effective than policies centered on the data employees share and how they use AI across workflows.

Legal sessions averaged 6.4 minutes per AI task—shorter than engineering or strategy, where conversations tend to involve longer analytical work—but Harmonic said legal's combination of high volume and highly sensitive subject matter creates the greatest potential data exposure of any department in the dataset.

"Legal is to be commended for largely using enterprise-tools but even the small amount of personal use we identified is a risk," said Alastair Paterson, CEO and co-founder of Harmonic Security. "Lawyers input the most sensitive categories of content an employee could put into an AI prompt and free tools are outside the scope of IT departments. Lawyers risk breaking the very data protection laws they seek to uphold as soon as they use them. By understanding AI use cases and outcomes, enterprises can better understand their AI investments and make better decisions accordingly."

Discovery

Intel factors.

For applicants, don't neglect these factors. Courts will expect applications to justify the discovery both under the statutory requirements and the discretionary factors. Ensure that your requests are targeted, and that the discovery you are seeking can actually be used in the foreign proceeding.

For opponents, do not be afraid to forcefully argue that discretionary factors foreclose discovery. Courts may also consider other arguments beyond the four enumerated factors, making the discretionary factors fertile ground for a party opposed to the discovery to raise a variety of challenges, even if novel.

Limit the scope of your discovery requests from the start. If a court finds a request is too broad or burdensome, it may well deny the application entirely even though it would have granted a narrower request.

Ex Parte Proceedings and Opposing a Section 1782 Order

Most Section 1782 requests are filed ex parte (without notice to the opposing party) and are often granted quickly. However, the person or entity receiving the subpoena (or other interested parties) can then move to vacate the order or quash the subpoena.

Motion to Vacate: Argues that the court should withdraw its prior order granting the Section 1782 application, often by challenging the statutory requirements or discretionary factors.

Motion to Quash: Focuses on narrowing or nullifying the specific subpoena, for instance on grounds of overbreadth, attorney-client privilege, or undue burden on the party from whom discovery is sought.

These motions can halt discovery obligations until the court rules. In some cases, the parties may negotiate a compromise or narrow the scope of discovery while these motions are pending.

Think U.S. Discovery May Be Useful For You?

If you are a foreign litigant or lawyer participating in litigation outside the United States but believe relevant documents or witnesses may be located in the United States, you should consider if Section 1782 may be helpful to you. Keep the following in mind:

Pinpoint targets. Are any entities or individuals who may have relevant documents or information about your case located in the United States? If so, they could be a potential target of Section 1782 discovery. But don't cast too wide a net—pursue Section 1782 only if the information in the United States is truly relevant to your case.

Go Narrow, Win Big. U.S. courts frown on fishing expeditions. A well-defined discovery request is more likely to sail through and less likely to provoke a scorched-earth opposition.

Research Admissibility At Home First. If your home court won't admit foreign evidence or has strict discovery rules, your application may be denied. Even a victory may be hollow if you cannot use the evidence in your home court.

Ex Parte Isn't a Free Pass. You can file without notice to the opposing party at first, but plan for the possibility of a fight once the target sees the subpoena. Build in time to litigate a disputed application or negotiate scope with the target.

Just Received A Section 1782 Subpoena?

Have you just received a Section 1782 subpoena, or learned that the opposing party in your foreign litigation has obtained one? Keep these strategies in mind:

Pause, Read, React. An expansive Section 1782 subpoena can feel alarming, but it is not final. Note your response deadlines—you can push back if you act promptly.

Avoid All-or-Nothing Thinking. Total annihilation of the application or subpoena is not always necessary. Sometimes it is most strategic (and most efficient) to negotiate a narrowed scope rather than fighting tooth and nail.

Protect Privilege. Section 1782 doesn't override attorney-client privilege or other legal shields. Don't waive your rights by producing privileged materials.

Leverage Realities On the Ground. Even if the statutory requirements are satisfied, the U.S. court can still say no. Undue burden, irrelevance, or unfairness to parties abroad can all torpedo an otherwise valid request.

Conclusion

Section 1782 offers a powerful tool for accessing U.S.-style discovery for use in foreign proceedings. Because U.S. courts have broad discretion to grant or deny such discovery, any party—whether seeking discovery or resisting it—should be prepared to address not only the statutory requirements but also the facts "on the ground" that justify (or negate) the need for the discovery sought.

By understanding how courts evaluate Section 1782 applications and what defenses are available, foreign litigants and counsel can better navigate the strategic advantages and pitfalls of this discovery tool in the United States.

In some cases, the parties may negotiate a compromise or narrow the scope of discovery while these motions are pending.

communications over the law firm deals with Trump and law firm EOs.

The DOJ requested that firms provide "all communications on or after January 20, 2025 that [the firm] sent to Boris Epshteyn, received from Boris Epshteyn, or participated in with Boris Epshteyn."

It also asked for any communications the firms sent to, received from or participated in with the other 13 law firms and the American Bar Association relating to Epshteyn.

The subpoena demands go further than the Epshteyn communications, though.

The subpoenas asked for "all communications on or after January 20, 2025 reflecting or relating to any Agreement(s), including any negotiations relating to any Agreements, and any communications concerning the implementation, enforcement, or monitoring of such Agreements."

It also asked the firms for all communications on or after Jan. 20, 2025, relating to any law firm executive order, as well as any "any social media posts, and any direct messages, discussing or relating to any Law Firm Executive Order or Agreement."

The deadline to respond to the subpoenas for document production was set for last week, and firms were to provide responses to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York or the Justice Department's D.C. office at 1100 L St., N.W.

Among the recipients of the subpoenas is Covington & Burling. Trump targeted the firm through a presidential memo early last year, directing the suspension of security clearances of Covington & Burling partner Peter Koski and other attorneys at the firm who have represented former special counsel Jack Smith.

However, Covington, which was not hit with an EO, has not been embroiled in active litigation with the Trump administration like the four law firms that were targeted by executive orders—Susman Godfrey; Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr; Jenner & Block; and Perkins Coie, now Ashurst Perkins Coie. All four of those firms filed lawsuits to void those executive orders and received favorable rulings in the district court. However, the DOJ appealed the cases to a federal appeals court, where they are now awaiting a final ruling.

The subpoenas were issued by the DOJ as part of a discovery dispute in the ABA's suit against the Trump administration's alleged law firm intimidation policy.

The ABA initially attempted to subpoena Epshteyn over his reported role in coordinating the deals with the nine law firms. The DOJ responded to that request by asking a judge to quash that subpoena. The ABA then filed a subsequent motion to compel the DOJ to respond to their subpoena over Epshteyn communications.

The judge in the case, U.S. District Judge Amir Ali in Washington, D.C., has not yet ruled on DOJ's motion to quash the ABA's subpoenas, or the ABA's competing motion to compel.

The DOJ's subpoenas to the 14 firms are an attempt to put pressure on the ABA to drop its suit, several legal observers have suggested, Law.com has reported.

A DOJ spokesperson told Law.com last week: "We sent the subpoenas to the law firms to reinforce our argument that the ABA should obtain this information from its own members, rather than a close presidential advisor."

The DOJ also filed a motion on Friday asking the court to disqualify Susman as counsel for the ABA in the case, arguing that Susman cannot advocate for the ABA and serve as a fact witness.

"That rule—and even the ABA's own Model Rule 3.7—contains a bright-line rule prohibiting a lawyer from serving as both advocate and fact witness in the same matter with narrow exceptions, which do not apply here," the DOJ argued in its motion.

Off the Front

US Growth

York and other top cities in the U.S., said Michael Parrillo, a New York recruiter at Parrillo Search Group. "That makes moving up the league table harder than it's ever been," Parrillo said. "U.K. firms are in an interesting position—paying at U.S. market rates without the large-scale profitability of the U.S. market in the most crowded lateral hiring environment in a generation."

These firms, however, continue to add star power through lateral moves, and their continuing deal flow and league table standing reflect their close client connections to large corporations, financial institutions and Big Tech firms.

Further, U.K-founded firms each have their own U.S. growth strategy and are at different phases of growth, making it difficult to put a broad label across them all. Their challenges and successes are part of a larger battle for talent in the U.S. that evolves each year.

Lateral Moves

At least 11 partners have left Clifford Chance in the U.S. between July 2025 and July 2026, according to SurePoint Technologies data, whose departure figures include lateral moves and retirements. Most recently, the firm saw seven additional partner exits in the first two weeks of July 2026, going to Sidley Austin and Simpson Thacher & Bartlett.

In comparison, Clifford Chance brought in 10 partner hires from June 2025 to June 2026.

However, the firm's own numbers show a 40% growth in its U.S. partnership since 2023.

Sharis Pozen, partner and head of the Americas at Clifford Chance, said in a statement to Law.com that the firm is strong and will continue to demonstrate that strength in the U.S.

"Clifford Chance's U.S. business is growing at the fastest pace we have seen in more than a decade," Pozen said. "Over the past three years, we have accelerated the scale, profitability and market recognition of our U.S. platform, our U.S. lateral pipeline is terrific, and our upcoming financial results will further demonstrate that momentum."

Freshfields has made one of the most ambitious plays on this side of the Atlantic. Freshfields—after hiring dealmakers such as Ethan Klingsberg from Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton and Damien Zoubek from Cravath Swaine & Moore in the last decade—saw its M&A league table rankings jump. In the first half of 2026, the firm ranked in the global top 10 across several M&A league tables.

"My impression is that Freshfields has made more progress in the U.S. than any firm in recent history," said law firm consultant Kent Zimmermann, co-chair of Zeughauser Group. "They have made lateral and group hires and built in good areas, like sophisticated transactions."

But Freshfields' campaign in the U.S. is starting to show signs of cracking, said one source familiar with the firm, noting that while it has added a lot of stellar partners, other hires haven't worked out well, and the firm has lost some stickiness in the U.S.

Freshfields has seen up to 14 partner exits in the past 12 months, according to SurePoint data, while adding nine partners in the U.S during that time period. The firm also recently elevated 13 attorneys to partner in the U.S.

A handful of the exits in the last 18 months have had "co-head" or "head" titles prior to their exits, according to data reviewed by Law.com, such as Adam Golden, the head of Freshfields' life sciences practice, who left in April 2026 to take the GC role at Avalyn Pharma; Allison Liff, co-head of the firm's banking practice, who left for Ropes & Gray in March; and Paul Tiger, co-head of U.S. M&A, who left in 2025 and is now with White & Case as of February.

The firm, which declined to comment for this report, retooled its partner comp in 2026 to more strongly compete in the market.

Freshfields increased partner pay for higher-performing partners in the U.S. to around $17 million to $18 million, according to a source familiar with Freshfields. The firm, at the same time, decreased the pay of other partners.

The comp moves were partly geared toward stopping some talent leaks, the source said, while the June promotion of Zoubek to become the firm's U.S. managing partner helped secure the rainmaker at Freshfields. "He now earns closer to where he should in the market," the source said.

Merger Opportunities

After the international mergers lately forming A&O Shearman, HSF Kramer, Ashurst Perkins Coie, and Winston Taylor, opportunities to combine with U.S. firms to find better footing are still being sought.

Linklaters, for instance, has made multiple overtures to U.S. firms in recent years, including Cleary, looking for an appropriate combination, according to sources familiar with the talks. Other top-earning U.K.-based peers in recent years have also sought out merger talks in the U.S. and have seen a chilly reception, Law.com reported last week.

Linklaters, however, disputes that the firm has been seeking a merger.

"We are not pursuing a merger and have not approached any firm about a merger," said George Casey, chair of the Americas and global chair of corporate, in a statement to Law.com. "Our focus is on building out our teams with top lateral talent where clients are looking for elite capability and where we have a leading market position globally. Our recent lateral additions are a clear example of that strategy in action and underscore the scale of our ambition in the U.S."

Linklaters has had four partner exits (including two retirements) from July 2025 through June 2026, but it also brought in one new partner hire and promoted four U.S. lawyers to partner during that time.

In addition, this month, the firm hired two laterals from Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison—Chris Boehning and Dan Levi—bringing an elite disputes team and highly regarded sports practice.

Casey said his firm is going strong in the U.S. and is continuing to build a "market-leading" presence in the country.

"The growth of our partnership, the quality of lawyers choosing to join us, and our financial performance all point to the same conclusion: we have strong momentum and remain highly confident in the trajectory of our U.S. practice," Casey said.

'That Gap Has Been Growing'

For any international firm opening or expanding here, the U.S. market offers a paradox: higher billing rates and larger profit margins; but fiercer competition to attract and retain talent, and higher pay scales with which to compete.

Part of the talent problem is the sheer size, power and profitability of many American firms. A source familiar with Clifford Chance, Freshfields and Linklaters said that many top U.K.-founded firms look to the top talent when recruiting in America, but get burned in efforts to match the top-talent prices offered by the highest-earning Am Law 100 firms.

"The most profitable U.K. firms are considerably less profitable than the most profitable U.S. firms," the source said. "And so that makes it hard both to compete for talent and to merge with any of them. And that gap has been growing."

While U.K.-founded firms have revised their pay systems to accommodate higher pay packages, they are still not able to reach the $25 million to $30 million that top U.S. firms are paying their star partners, Bersani said. The top of the pay ladder for several U.K.-founded firms is still below $20 million, he added.

"Even if you're willing to pay upfront to get the talent, you have to continue to pay them, and they have to produce," Bersani said.

At the same time, U.K.-founded firms' compensation to U.S. partners continues to be a source of tension within their international partnerships, several industry sources said.

"There's a lot of discontent—a lot of partners are really unhappy" about pay for U.S. laterals, because it can take a decade or longer to see returns on those lateral investments, one source familiar with the firms said.

Retention

Some firm partnership agreements have mechanisms in place to dissuade partner exits. For instance, Clifford Chance cited a section of its partnership agreement in attempting to claw back money from former partners, according to a June lawsuit brought by Clifford Cone and Michael Sabin, who had left for Sidley Austin.

According to court documents, Clifford Chance's partnership agreement provides that any partners who depart with more than 300 units (or ownership shares of the firm) may have their unit allocation reduced to 280 from the date of their departure notice.

Cone and Sabin have argued that the provision is an unlawful restrictive covenant meant to stop attorneys from seeking work elsewhere.

While some U.K. firms have had some difficulties in the U.S. in retaining and recruiting talent, that does not mean the problem is unique to those firms. A source knowledgeable about the market said many of these issues arise from the bottom line in the legal industry.

"It's part of a bigger picture," the source said, pointing to a more segmented market where some firms are growing by leaps in market share and profits. "Everybody is challenged who's falling behind on profitability" compared with their top peers in the industry.

Ice Cream

upsetting, to say the least," Barron said. "The relief is very significant, and they are looking forward to growing their business."

Van Leeuwen sells its dairy ice cream in monochromatic cardboard pints with matching lids, primarily pastel colors, black cursive lettering and a minimalist design.

The company defined its trade dress as the combination of those features, including an enlarged capital letter sweeping across the front of each pint and additional descriptive text in black lettering.

Rebel, a Utah company founded by Austin and Courtney Archibald in 2017, used a closely similar color scheme, script and layout. Its packaging included additional information highlighting the ice cream's low sugar and carbohydrate content.

Komitee found that Van Leeuwen's combination of design elements was inherently distinctive, even though individual features such as pastel colors or cursive lettering were not unique on their own.

"Van Leeuwen selected the elements in question from an unbounded universe of options," he wrote.

Barron said Van Leeuwen also views the ruling as meaningful for designers and companies that invest in developing a distinctive visual identity.

"They shouldn't lose the right to have that protected," she said.

The similarities extended beyond the four elements Van Leeuwen formally identified as its trade dress, according to the ruling. Both brands placed their social media information in the same area of the pints, and the trial revealed no third ice cream brand with packaging that strongly resembled both designs.

Komitee also found evidence that consumers and store employees had confused the products.

The decision cited several examples. In a 2024 message to Rebel, a consumer said her husband mistakenly purchased Rebel after she sent him to buy Van Leeuwen because the products were displayed together and "looked the same." She said she had nearly made the same mistake herself.

Komitee also noted trial evidence that store employees placed Rebel price tags on Van Leeuwen pints and intermingled the two brands.

Van Leeuwen alleged both forward confusion, in which consumers might believe it made Rebel's products, and reverse confusion, in which consumers might mistake Rebel for the source of Van Leeuwen's ice cream.

Rebel's founders testified that they had never seen Van Leeuwen's packaging when they created their design. Austin Archibald said he first encountered Van Leeuwen during a July 2018 meeting with a Wegmans buyer, before Rebel had entered grocery-store freezers.

The buyer told Archibald that Rebel's packaging resembled Van Leeuwen's, but Rebel did not change the design.

Barron said the Rebel founders' explanation of how they developed the packaging was not credible.

"The testimony of the Rebel founders didn't ring true at all," she said.

She pointed to expert testimony about the similarities between the brands, evidence that the products appeared side by side in stores and Rebel's lack of documentation showing how it developed its design.

Komitee reached a similarly sharp conclusion.

"To be blunt, their testimony concerning the development of Rebel's packaging was clearly fabricated," he wrote.

The judge pointed to the packages' shared pastel backgrounds, exclusive use of black lettering, cursive brand names, oversized initial capital letters, placement of the names on the cartons and shift from script to block lettering for other information.

"The likelihood of all these design features converging at random is infinitesimal," Komitee wrote.

He also questioned the Rebel founders' assertion that they had saved no drafts or other work product documenting the development of Rebel's design.

Van Leeuwen first learned of Rebel's packaging in late 2018 or early 2019, after an employee saw the product on social media. Co-founder Ben Van Leeuwen testified that the company's founders were shocked because Rebel's packaging looked "almost exactly like" their own.

Van Leeuwen sought $36.4 million in Rebel's profits. Komitee accepted Rebel's calculation that it had earned $35.5 million from the infringing pints but reduced that amount by one-third.

The judge found that part of Rebel's success was attributable to demand for ketogenic and better-for-you products rather than its packaging. Rebel had argued for an award of no more than $5 million but did not provide a reliable method for making a larger reduction, according to the ruling.

The resulting $23.785 million award represents disgorgement of Rebel's profits rather than compensation for specific sales Van Leeuwen proved it lost.

Komitee also ordered Rebel to develop packaging that creates a "substantially different commercial impression" and does not use Van Leeuwen's asserted trade dress elements.

"Rebel is enjoined from selling products that bear trade dress likely to be confused with Van Leeuwen's," the judge wrote.

The case is Van Leeuwen Ice Cream LLC v. Rebel Creamery LLC, 1:21-cv-02356, in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York.

Penalty

Seeking to argue to the contrary, the defendant insurer cited to some of the same authority as the insurers who had previously litigated the Bear Stearns' insurance dispute before the First Department and the Court of Appeals, including Kokesh v. SEC, 137 S.Ct. 1635 (2017).

In Kokesh, the United States Supreme Court had determined that disgorgement in the context of an SEC enforcement proceeding is subject to the statute of limitations for penalties, explaining that "SEC disgorgement… bears all the hallmarks of a penalty."

As a result of the Kokesh ruling, the First Department had held that SEC disgorgement constituted an excluded penalty under Bear Stearns' insurance policy, but the Court of Appeals reversed this ruling, holding that Kokesh was not dispositive because it did not address the issue in the context of an insurance contract interpretation and noting that the meaning of the term "penalty" may vary depending on the circumstances.

The Court of Appeals ruled that that the SEC disgorgement payment made by Bear Stearns was not a penalty under the insurance contract before it. JP Morgan Sec. Inc. v. Vigilant Ins. Co., 37 N.Y.3d at Inc.552.

The Delaware court cited that Court of Appeals' ruling with approval, holding that the United States Supreme Court precedent in Kokesh was not applicable and ruling that "in the context of SEC enforcement and the Policy as a whole, the Civil Penalties Exclusion unambiguously excluded SEC civil monetary penalties but not SEC disgorgement or prejudgment interest paid in settlement." 2026 WL 1347392 at *11.

> In sum, the Delaware court ruled in favor of Clear Channel on summary judgment holding that the insurer was required to indemnify Clear Channel for the disgorgement and prejudgment interest portions of the SEC settlement.

The Uninsurability Exclusion

The defendant insurer also contended that the disgorgement payment was uninsurable as a matter of law because it was against public policy to insure such disgorgement payments. The Delaware court also rejected this argument.

According to the court, Delaware courts will only interfere with parties' contractual agreements where there is "a strong showing that dishonoring the contract is required to vindicate a public policy interest even stronger than freedom of contract."

Therefore, in the absence of clear guidance from the legislature, the Delaware courts have "declined to hold alleged uninsurable conduct uninsurable on public policy grounds." For example, Delaware courts have held that there is no public policy against insuring against punitive damages. Whalen v. On-Deck, Inc. 514 A.2d 1072 (Del. 1986).

In Sycamore Partners Management, L.P. v. Endurance American Insurance Company, 2021 WL 761639 (Del. Super Ct. Feb. 26, 2021), the same Delaware trial court had rejected a similar argument that insuring a disgorgement payment was against public policy. Reaching the same conclusion, the court held that no public policy stronger than the parties' freedom of contract was implicated and therefore the defendant insurer's public policy argument fails.

In sum, the Delaware court ruled in favor of Clear Channel on summary judgment holding that the insurer was required to indemnify Clear Channel for the disgorgement and prejudgment interest portions of the SEC settlement.

The Delaware court did reject Clear Channel's bad faith claim against the defendant insurer, ruling that although the court disagreed with the insurer's position on the coverage dispute, the "coverage defenses were not without reasonable justification" and the insurer's claims handling conduct was not egregious.

Looking Forward

In the Clear Channel ruling, the Delaware trial court followed New York's lead finding that SEC disgorgement was not an excluded penalty under an exclusion that only expressly barred "civil penalties" nor was is it uninsurable as a matter of law under the insurance policy issued to Clear Channel. While this is undoubtedly a noteworthy development, the case may still be appealed.

In addition, the ruling does not mean that in all cases SEC disgorgement is covered. Rather, it stands for two propositions: (i) an exclusion that bars "civil penalties" should not be broadly construed to also bar disgorgement payments; and (ii) Delaware law does not have a public policy against insuring disgorgement in an insurance contract.

In any coverage dispute, the specifics of the SEC enforcement proceeding and related settlement will be relevant as will the specific language of the insurance policy. Nevertheless, it does appear that New York, and now likely also Delaware, will not be holding that SEC disgorgement is in all cases an uninsurable penalty.

besides Beasley Allen?" according to the transcript.

"The only other law firm we moved to disqualify is the Beasley Allen law firm," Haas answered.

On cross-examination by Johnson & Johnson attorney Matthew Bush of Pensacola, Florida's McDonald Fleming, Birchfield testified at the hearing that, in 2023, after the first talc bankruptcy was dismissed, Molton, who was bankruptcy counsel for the tort claimants committee, suggested he contact Conlan, then at Legacy. At Birchfield's first meeting with Conlan, there were several other lawyers there, including Parfitt.

"There was no effort to hide this," Birchfield told him, according to the transcript.

Workflow

intelligence can detect and what traditional legal investigation may find.

Consider the challenge of identifying a potential ERISA breach of fiduciary duty claim. The legal theory requires establishing that a plan's investment options chronically underperformed comparable benchmarks.

In principle, this sounds tractable. In practice, the data is a mess: funds change names, databases are inconsistent, performance records are scattered across multiple sources, and the comparisons must be conducted continuously over time across hundreds of plans simultaneously. Traditional investigation, working case by case, might surface evidence of a problem in isolation.

Legal intelligence can identify the pattern across the entire market simultaneously, identifying which plans have the most significant and sustained performance, and ranking them by the strength of the potential claim. This can be used to understand a violation has occurred, or about to occur.

Or consider a more complex example: establishing a causal connection between a herbicide containing a known carcinogen and a cluster of cancer diagnoses in nearby communities.

The underlying data exists—agricultural records, environmental monitoring, medical reports, geographic data, social media chatter, but it is distributed across dozens of unconnected sources, none of which individually establishes the legal element of causation.

Legal intelligence can map the spatial relationships between chemical application and health outcomes, overlay environmental flow data to model exposure pathways, and construct the evidentiary architecture for a causation argument that would be essentially impossible to build through conventional investigation.

> What Legal Intelligence introduces is not simply a new capability for lawyers. It is a narrowing of the gap between what the law could potentially address and what it can address.

Data Has No Side

The legal profession has always understood that the quality of legal work is only as good as the quality of the data underlying it.

What legal intelligence introduces is a meaningful expansion of what that information can be—not just the documents in a file or the precedents in a database, but the patterns embedded across thousands of unconnected sources that, taken together, tell a more complete story about where risk lives, where harm is occurring, and where the facts most strongly support a legal theory.

The consequences of information gaps in the legal system are not merely professional. When legally significant patterns go undetected, certain conduct continues longer than they should and which could have been remedied earlier. Risks do not get properly evaluated.

Harm compounds before anyone with the ability to act on or cure it has noticed it. The legal system, which exists to address such risks, operates with incomplete information—not because the information does not exist, but because no available tool could aggregate and analyze it.

What legal intelligence introduces is not simply a new capability for lawyers. It is a narrowing of the gap between what the law could potentially address and what it can address.

A legal ecosystem that operates with better, earlier, more complete information produces better outcomes for the practitioners navigating it, for the clients depending on it, and for the broader fabric of accountability for plaintiffs and defendants that the profession exists to uphold. The technology is new. The aspiration it serves is not.

New Executive Director/Administrator Of the Criminal Assigned Counsel Plan Appointed

Today, Presiding Justice Dianne T. Renwick announced the appointment of Steven Chavez, Esq. as the Executive Director/Administrator for the Assigned Counsel Plan (ACP) for the First Judicial Department, effective immediately. In this role, Mr. Chavez will be responsible for the operational oversight of the attorneys assigned to represent indigent parties in criminal matters.

As Director/Administrator, Mr. Chavez will evaluate attorneys seeking appointment to the ACP panel, supervise ACP office staff, assign attorneys to ensure adequate court coverage; investigate complaints regarding plan attorneys; coordinate CLE training, and develop and implement operating procedures. He will also serve as liaison among plan attorneys, court personnel, city agencies and bar associations.

Mr. Chavez brings a wealth of experience to this position. He has served as the Supervising Attorney for Operations and Supervising Attorney for Specialty Courts at ACP Office, working closely with the courts and panel attorneys since 2021 and gaining insight into all aspects of ACP operations. Prior to joining the ACP Office, Mr. Chavez practiced criminal defense for more than 15 years in the First Judicial Department, as a Supervisor and Attorney with the Legal Aid Society, where he conducted felony and misdemeanor trials, and supervised attorneys handling criminal matters. NYS UNIFIED COURT SYSEM

Rule Changes Will Enhance Judicial Visitation Program, Deepening Understanding and Strengthening Connections

The Unified Court System today announced significant amendments to Part 17 of the Rules of the Chief Judge, that will require judges serving in criminal and family courts to conduct at least one visit per year to a prison, jail, or other detention facility, starting January 1, 2028. This positions New York as the first state in the nation to mandate immersive yearly visits by all trial court judges responsible for sentencing or detention decisions. The reimagined Part 17 aims to deepen judicial insight into incarceration conditions, and to enhance visibility and promote stronger understanding and communication among corrections systems, incarcerated individuals, and the judiciary.

Under the new Part 17, judicial visits to facilities will include opportunities for meaningful time in key areas such as intake, housing, work education, recreation, visitation, dining, and medical and mental health facilities. Judges will also have an opportunity to meet with incarcerated individuals, employees, administrators, and service providers. Additionally, visits will rotate among facility types, including state prisons, local jails, and youth and women's facilities — in accordance with judicial assignments, as delineated in the amended rules — and, to the extent practicable, across regions of the State.

The amendments to Part 17 follow years of in-depth study by the court system's Advisory Committee on Criminal Law and Procedure, an effort led by Committee Chair Judge Daniel P. Conviser and Committee member Michael B. Mushlin, Professor Emeritus at Pace University: School of Law. The Committee's proposal for a new Part 17 was circulated for public comment in September 2025. Nearly 150 comments were received from a wide variety of individuals and organizations, including present and former judges, medical professionals, academics, currently and formerly incarcerated individuals and organizations advocating for them, defense counsel, prosecutors, other practicing attorneys, correctional facility professionals, clergy, social work and mental health professionals, international experts, and everyday citizens. The overwhelming majority expressed strong support for this program of enhanced judicial visitation.

The new Part 17 (https://www.nycourts.gov/rules/part-17-judicial-education-andtraining#section-202926) will take effect January 1, 2028, to allow sufficient time for successful implementation, which will include a new judicial orientation and education program and significant logistical planning. To this end, the court system will establish an advisory task force, bringing together trial court judges, judicial associations, court administrators, correctional and detention facility representatives, and experts from relevant fields related to corrections and the rights of incarcerated persons.

NEW YORK STATE COURT OF APPEALS

Court Invites Amicus Curiae Participation in:

Matter of Katonah-Lewisboro Union Free School District v. NYSE

Matter of Mahopac Central School District v. NYSED

On April 21, 2026, the Court granted leave to appeal in Matter of Katonah-Lewisboro Union Free School District v. New York State Education Department (APL-2026-00046) and Matter of Mahopac Central School District v. New York State Education Department (APL 2026- 00047).

Both appeals involve the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act [IDEA] (20 USC § 1400) and the state New York Education Law § 4402 (5). Under the IDEA, public schools in New York must provide special education and related services to students with disabilities until the age of 22. Education Law § 4402 (5), however, provides that eligibility for such services ends at the conclusion of the school year in which the student turns 21.

In a federal case interpreting the IDEA and Connecticut law, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that because Connecticut law allows individuals over the age of 21 to pursue publicly funded adult education programs, the state must likewise provide a comparable free and appropriate public education to students with disabilities between the ages of 21 and 22 (see A.R. v Connecticut State Bd. of Educ., 5 F4th 155 [2d Cir 2021]).

New York's State Education Department issued a formal opinion that A.R. is equally applicable in New York and relied on that opinion in sustaining complaints against School Districts that determined students with disabilities were eligible for special education and related services only until the end of the school years in which the students turned 21.

School Districts commenced these proceedings to annul SED's determinations, and Supreme Court granted the petitions. The Appellate Division, Third Department, reversed.

The Court invites amicus curiae participation from those qualified and interested.

Amicus motions must comply with section 500.23 of the Court's Rules of Practice. Docket information, briefing schedules, filings and the oral argument date for these appeals are or will be available through the Court's Public Access and Search System (CourtPASS).

Questions may be directed to the Clerk's Office at 518-455-7705.
