GC for State Program Retrained After Having Workers Perform Personal Tasks for Her

The general counsel for a New York government agency agreed to ethics retraining, after she admitted violating the Public Officers Law by having a subordinate employee conduct personal favors, the ethics watchdog said on Thursday.

Trishia Allen, general counsel for the New York State Office of Addiction Services and Supports, had the subordinate watch and board her dog while she was on vacation, and routinely had the employee accompany her on private outings, including a weekend away in Lake Placid, the state Commission on Ethics and Lobbying in Government said.

Allen also had that employee and another pick up her lunch inside and outside the office, according to the commission.

Allen didn't immediately respond to a message on Thursday.

Allen has already completed her ethics retraining as part of a settlement with COELIG, the agency said. The settlement didn't involve any payment or civil penalty.

The watchdog said Allen's conduct "gave a reasonable basis for the impression that a person could unduly enjoy her favor and that raised public suspicion that she was likely engaged in acts in violation of her trust."

OASAS coordinates state and federal relations in addiction services and oversees one of the nation's largest substance use disorder systems of care, with about 1,700 prevention, treatment and recovery programs that serve more than 730,000 New Yorkers each year, that agency says.

No 'Minimum Contacts' Required To Sue Foreign States, SCOTUS Finds

The U.S. Supreme Court on Thursday made it easier for plaintiffs to sue foreign countries in U.S. courts, rejecting an appellate ruling that the countries must have "minimum contacts" with the United States before a federal court can hear the case.

The justices unanimously held that plaintiffs need only show that a legal exception to the 1976 Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act applies to be able to bring a lawsuit against another government in a U.S. court. The ruling is a victory for U.S. investors seeking to enforce a $1.3 billion judgment against an Indian state-owned entity over an Indian satellite deal gone awry.

Below, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit agreed with the Indian government that its state-owned entity Antrix lacked the minimum contacts with the United States necessary to establish consent to jurisdiction in U.S. courts.

The counterparty to the scuttled satellite deal, Devas Multimedia Private Ltd., and its U.S. investors, appealed the Ninth Circuit's decision to the Supreme Court in an attempt to enforce the massive arbitration award.

"The facts of this suit are complex, but the legal question we address today is straightforward," Justice Samuel Alito Jr. wrote for the high court. "The text and structure of the FSIA demonstrate that Congress did not require 'minimum contacts' over and above the contacts already required by the Act's enumerated exceptions to foreign sovereign immunity."

The "most natural reading" of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act is that federal courts have "automatic" jurisdiction over foreign countries any time a plaintiff can show that one of the law's immunity exceptions apply, and that the country was properly served, Alito added.

The court therefore reversed the Ninth Circuit's decision requiring plaintiffs to show how a government had the made the requisite "minimum contacts" with the United States to establish jurisdiction.

The Ninth Circuit had said that the FSIA incorporated the "minimum contacts" test, which comes from the Supreme Court's landmark 1945 ruling International Shoe v. State of Washington. There, the justices held that the Constitution's due process protection » Page 4

New Bill Backed by Manhattan DA Would Streamline Admission Of Grand Jury Business Records

BY EMILY SAUL

NEW YORK remains one of the last states where prosecutors must call custodial witnesses to present business records to the grand jury.

But a new bill, drafted with the input of the Manhattan District Attorney's Office, could change all that.

The legislation, introduced by Assembly Member Alex Bores, D-Manhattan, would allow prosecutors to enter business records into grand jury proceedings via affidavit, as opposed to through a custodial witness.

Andrew Warshawer, deputy chief of the Trial Division under Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg, said the adjustment would be a game-changer for prosecutors.

Assembly Member Alex Bores, D-Manhattan

Currently, all 62 DAs offices around the state have to use taxpayer money to fly representatives from companies to answer basic questions confirming the documents belong to their company and were generated in the normal course of business.

"There's nothing that's customized to a case, right?" Warshawer said of the authentication. "It's, 'Are these your records?' Are they authentic?' 'Are they » Page 6

Skadden Arps' Discussions Around Nonequity Tier, Partner Comp Accelerate

BY PATRICK SMITH

A RAFT of attorney exits, as well as a Big Law arm's race in partner compensation, is putting more pressure on Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom to create a nonequity tier and modify its compensation system, say sources familiar with the firm.

Law.com reported earlier this year that Skadden was considering a nonequity tier of partners. While it's not clear the timing of when Skadden may implement it, multiple sources say recent partner exits, amid other pressures, have sped up the deliberation process, and they said it was likely Skadden would build out a nonequity tier in the near future.

Part of the firm's discussed changes include modifying its compensation structure to allow for higher pay for certain partners, in a bid to attract and retain top-of-market talent. Skadden's current compensation structure is a performance-based model, but sources have said it doesn't quite get to the level of some of its competitors.

As reported last year by The American Lawyer, the firm's top-end compensation was in the $14 million to $16 million range as of late last year. Its New York competitor firms and others have made changes to pay top partners more than $20 million. One recruiter said the firm's pay spread is smaller than some of its competitor firms.

But another source said Skadden's comp for top laterals already appears to be higher this year, with the firm willing to pay » Page 4

Mangione Defense Counsel Legal Theory Undercuts Double Jeopardy Claims, Prosecutors Say

BY EMILY SAUL

PROSECUTORS with the Manhattan District Attorney's Office on Wednesday told a judge that the legal theory argued by attorneys to Luigi Mangione undermines their own argument for dismissal of the state case under double jeopardy laws.

Defense attorney Karen Friedman Agnifilo has repeatedly called the parallel state and federal cases against her client at odds with one another, as the state case alleges terrorism of a group of people and the federal indictment charges an individual stalking offense.

But it's that reasoning that allows the dual prosecutions to proceed at the same time, prosecutors told Manhattan Supreme Court Judge Gregory Carro.

"Defendant appears to agree that the two statutes punish different evils and involve different victims, thereby falling outside the ambit of New York's statutory double jeopardy," prosecutors wrote in response to a defense motion to dismiss the state case against Mangione.

Mangione, 27, was indicted in Manhattan Supreme Court in December on charges » Page 6

NY Intermediate Appeals Court, Differing With 2nd Circuit, Says Plaintiffs Can Use 'Saving Statute' Multiple Times

BY ALYSSA AQUINO

PLAINTIFFS may continually use New York's "Savings Statute" to refile certain cases that were dismissed, a Brooklyn-based state appeals court said, contradicting the federal Second Circuit, which only gives plaintiffs one shot at refiling under the law.

The Savings Statute is New York Civil Practice Law and Rules § 205(a), which gives some plaintiffs six months to resubmit cases that were dismissed, regardless of whether the statute of limitations had passed. Frank Tumminia had used that law twice to refile a wrongful death suit on behalf of his deceased wife, only for a state court to dismiss the case with prejudice, finding that the six-month extension could only be applied once.

But the Appellate Division, Second Department found that the law's provision that a case may be resubmitted if it "would have been timely commenced at the time of commencement of the prior action" meant that the law could be used to refile wrongful death lawsuits, one after the other, so long as the new case is submitted within six months of the old one.

Judge Rules Law Firm in Litigation With Musk Can Hire Ex-SEC Chief Litigation Counsel

BY MICHAEL A. MORA

THE U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York ruled Thursday that Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann can hire as a partner Jorge G. Tenreiro, who held a number of positions at the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, including chief litigation counsel, and, most recently, served in the agency's Office of Information Technology.

Defendant Elon Musk argued that the "extremely short time" that elapsed between the filing of an SEC action over the billionaire's purchase of Twitter Inc. and Tenreiro's outreach to BLB&G, which is lead counsel for the plaintiff, the Oklahoma Firefighters Pension and Retirement System, in a class action over the Twitter acquisition, created an "appearance of impropriety."

But U.S. Magistrate Judge Gabriel W. Gorenstein disagreed.

"[T]he timing of Tenreiro's departure appears to have been precipitated by his being assigned to detail in an office with a focus unrelated to his prior work and the agency's offering of a voluntary separation package," Gorenstein found. "More to the point, given that Tenreiro did not know that BLB&G was counsel in this case until sometime between March 15 and March 17, 2025, the length of the period between Tenreiro's alleged involvement with SEC actions against Musk and outreach to BLB&G is immaterial."

Oklahoma Firefighters brought the underlying case, alleging that the defendants, who include Musk, committed securities fraud when Musk concealed his ownership stake in the social media platform X, then operating as Twitter. The putative class action is on behalf of investors who sold Twitter securities between March 25, 2022, and April 4, 2022.

And on April 22, BLB&G asked the Southern District of New York to approve a "rou- » Page 4

Akin Takes on Government on Behalf of PBS

BY BRENDA SAPINO JEFFREYS
WASHINGTON, D.C.

AKIN GUMP Strauss Hauer & Feld represents the Public Broadcasting Service and Northern Minnesota Public Television in a federal court lawsuit challenging a Trump executive order that would cut federal funding to PBS and attacks PBS and member stations "in a manner that will upend public television."

In an executive order on May 1, President Donald Trump stated that government funding of private sources of non-commercial media is "corrosive," and said that PBS, and National Public Radio, fail to provide "fair, accurate, unbiased, and nonpartisan news."

PBS disputes that, and asserts in the complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief that "regardless of any policy disagreements over the role of public television, our constitution and laws forbid the president from serving as the arbiter of the content of PBS's programming, including by attempting to defund PBS."

The lawsuit, filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia on May 30, seeks declaratory and injunctive relief.

Z.W. Julius Chen, an Akin partner in Washington, D.C., who filed Public Broadcasting Service v. Trump, did not respond to requests for comment. Akin declined to comment through a spokesperson.

However, the firm is involved in at least one other suit filed as a result of Trump administration directives or policies. In April, the firm filed a suit in the same federal court on behalf of two family-owned businesses over tariffs they alleged exceed the authority delegated to the president. More than two dozen Big Law firms have filed suit against the Trump administration.

The plaintiffs allege in the complaint that Congress, through the Public Broadcasting Act, protects the funding from political interference by "filtering" the money through the nonpartisan Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and specifically prohibits the Executive Branch from having any control.

The executive order violates federal laws as well as the First Amendment, the plaintiffs assert in the suit. "The EO makes no attempt to hide the fact that it is cutting off the flow of funds to PBS because of the content of PBS programming and out of a desire to alter the content of speech. That is blatant viewpoint discrimination," the plaintiffs allege in the complaint.

The executive order instructs the CPB to cease all direct and indirect funding to PBS.

The plaintiffs bring several causes of action against Trump and other federal government defendants, including unlawful interference and violation of the First Amendment on a number of grounds, including viewpoint discrimination, editorial discretion, retaliation and freedom of the press.

Migrants' Lawyers Urge SCOTUS To Preserve Due Process Before Third Country Deportations

BY JIMMY HOOVER
WASHINGTON, D.C.

A GROUP of migrants are now "stranded incommunicado in Djibouti" as a result of the Trump administration's efforts to flout court-ordered due process, lawyers told the U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday.

In a legal filing, attorneys from the National Immigration Litigation Alliance, the Northwest Immigrant Rights Project and Human Rights First urged the justices to preserve those due process protections imposed by U.S. District Judge Brian Murphy of the District of Massachusetts.

The Trump administration is asking the Supreme Court for an emergency stay of Murphy's injunction, which requires immigration officials to provide notice and an opportunity for detainees to raise fears of torture upon their removal to a foreign country they are not originally from.

President Donald Trump's Department of Homeland Security has sought to ramp up these "third country" deportations in recent months, sending planes of immigrants to Libya, El Salvador and—in the most recent case—South Sudan. In the case of South Sudan, the U.S. government rerouted the plane to a military base in Djibouti in response to Murphy's midflight order.

Attorneys for the immigrants urged the Supreme Court to deny the administration's stay request.

"Their quarrel is not with the injunction but with the law itself and, thus, is not something this Court should remedy by means of an emergency stay," the attorneys wrote.

Under U.S. immigration laws, immigrants with removal orders are prohibited from being deported to their country of origin if an immigration judge finds they are likely to face severe persecution upon their return. In that instance, the government may, in some cases, deport the immigrant to a "third" country.

After the Department of Homeland Security began third-country deportations in February, four Latin American migrants targeted for such filed a class action challenging the deportations in Massachusetts federal court.

Since then, Murphy has issued a series of court orders requiring the government to first provide notice to the immigrant class members and give them an opportunity to argue that they will face torture in those places.

Murphy last month found that the government violated his injunction by providing minimal notice, mostly overnight, to a group of class members who were loaded onto a plane destined for South Sudan. Receiving the judge's latest order midflight, the government rerouted the plane to a military base in Djibouti, where the migrants have been held in the custody of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

U.S. Solicitor General D. John Sauer told the Supreme Court in an emergency request filed in late May that Murphy's order had created a "diplomatic and logistical morass."

But any logistical complications are the government's own fault, lawyers for the immigrants wrote in their opposition brief to the justices. The attorneys stated it was the Trump administration that had sought to evade Murphy's earlier commands to provide a meaningful opportunity to raise credible fears of torture in a foreign country.

Those individuals are now "stranded incommunicado in Djibouti, a country of which they have no knowledge, and en route to another country, South Sudan, where none have ever set foot and which remains engulfed in ongoing and intensifying armed conflict," the attorneys wrote. "There is every reason for concern, as the district court found, that if they were left there and somehow survived, it may be impossible for [the Trump administration] to get them back."

The State Department has warned that South Sudan presents risks of "crime, kidnapping, and armed conflict." In March, the U.S. Embassy in Juba, South Sudan's capital, said it was "reducing to minimal staffing ... due to continued security threats."

International experts say the country is at risk of civil war.

The Supreme Court has so far been skeptical of the Trump administration's efforts to remove immigrants to foreign countries. The justices upheld a Maryland federal judge's order to "facilitate" the return of Kilmar Armando Abrego Garcia to the United States from a prison complex in El Salvador where he was deported by mistake.

The Trump administration has so far failed to do so.

Further, the justices effectively grounded the government's efforts to use the Alien Enemies Act to send additional planes of suspected Venezuelan gang members to El Salvador's notorious CECOT prison. There, the court found that the Trump administration had not provided the migrants enough time to contest their removals.

Still, in the Alien Enemies Act litigation, the court made » Page 7

'A Moment of Hard Truths': Speakers at New York State Trial Lawyers Association Event Address Threats to Rule of Law

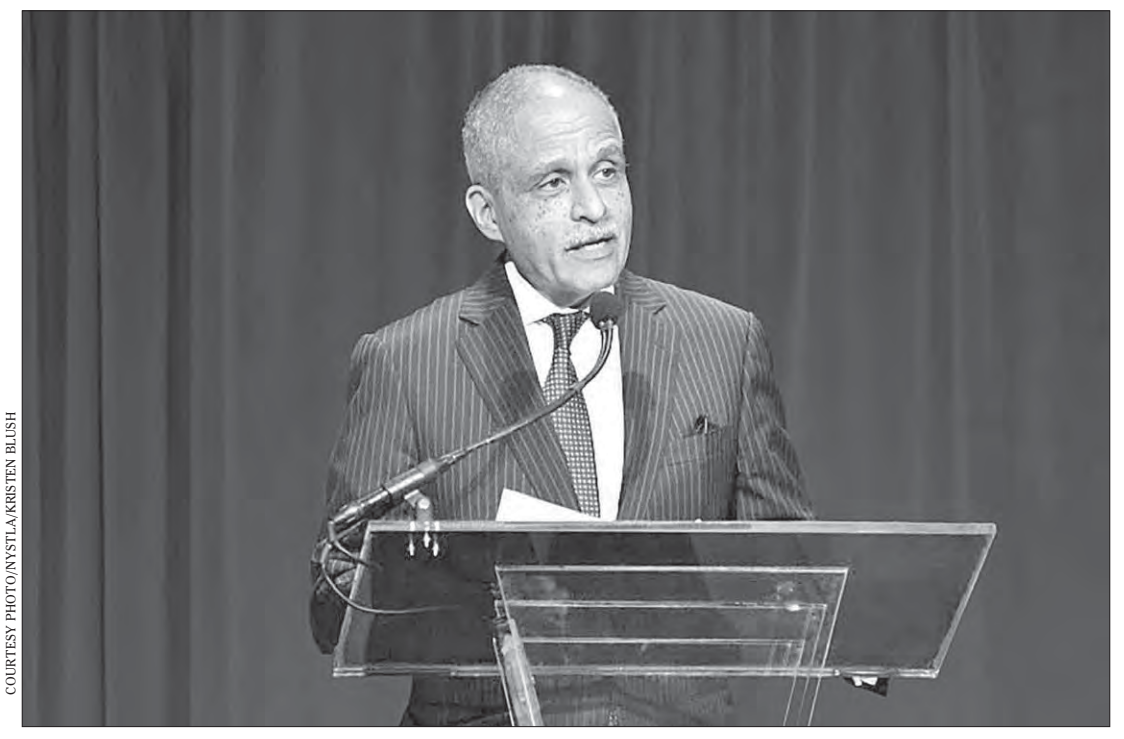

BY ANDREW DENNEY

And in remarks to the hundreds of lawyers and judges in attendance to the event, held at Cipriani Wall Street in Manhattan, both Wilson and Schiff addressed threats to the rule of law that have grown since President Donald Trump took office which Schiff said has given rise to a "moment of hard truths."

Schiff said that, with Congress under Republican control, lawyers and judges have served as crucial checks on the power of the Executive Branch.

"There is a reason why the administration began with the Shakespearean idea: 'first we kill all the lawyers'—that is 'first we try to put an end to the independence of the legal profession.' Because this administration understands that due process means nothing if there is no one to advocate what it means, if there is no one to stand between the immense power of the executive and the vulnerability of the average citizen—except you," Schiff said.

Schiff, who was elected to the Senate last year after serving for 13 years in the U.S. House of Representatives, was the lead manager of Trump's first impeachment trial in 2020.

NYSTLA honored Wilson this year for his "thoughtful, principled decisions that emphasize fairness and civil rights," according to a news release from the group.

"Our Constitution guarantees a jury trial to any person involved in a civil dispute—a foundational right that ensures justice is delivered fairly and impartially by one's peers, and empowers all citizens to play a direct role in the administration of justice," Wilson said in the release.

Past recipients of the champion of Justice Award include Presidents Bill Clinton and Joe Biden, U.S. Sens. Charles Schumer and Kirsten Gillibrand; U.S. Reps. Nancy Pelosi and Hakeem Jeffries; Gov. CIVIL RIGHTS AND THE URBAN LANDSCAPE

Congestion Pricing Follies

By Chris Dunn

The civil-rights dimensions of transportation policy have garnered greater attention in recent years, particularly as the country confronts the need to replace portions of the interstate highway system that destroyed urban minority communities when built in the 1950's and 1960's.

Here in New York, Robert Moses's bulldozing of Bronx neighborhoods to clear a path for the Cross Bronx Expressway and the pervasive lack of disability access to the New York City subway system are two prominent examples of the intersection between civil rights and transit.

The biggest transportation controversy in New York now is over congestion pricing, the program by which motorists entering lower Manhattan are charged tolls that are dedicated to mass transit throughout the New York City metropolitan area.

Though not widely discussed, congestion pricing presents a host of civil-rights issues, including the socio-economic distribution of benefits flowing from subway and bus improvements (minorities and lower-income people benefit the most), the harmful effects of traffic diverted from the tolling zone to roadways in minority communities, the impact of tolls on the "right to travel," and privacy concerns arising from the use of cameras to charge tolls.

The introduction of congestion pricing has spawned numerous federal lawsuits, the most significant of which are playing out in the Southern District of New York before Judge Lewis Liman.

Surrounding this litigation has been a set of head-spinning developments, including dramatic reversals by New York's governor and the federal government; a royalty proclamation from President Trump and hollow posturing by his Transportation Secretary Sean Duffy; and a revealing filing gaffe by the Department of Justice.

Last week, Liman preliminarily ordered the preservation of congestion pricing, which makes this a good time to survey the legal terrain and to assess what lies ahead.

Congestion Pricing in Brief

As Liman explained last year in his first major decision, congestion pricing traces its roots back to a 1952 article published by Columbia University economist and Nobel Laureate William Vickery proposing variable pricing to mitigate overcrowding in the New York City subway system.

> At the same time, congestion pricing does not appear to be generating the feared spillover effects, including jammed parking at the border of the toll zone and significant additional traffic on alternate routes.

That initial proposal grew into one encompassing vehicle congestion and prompted a decades-long policy debate and the adoption of congestion pricing in Singapore in 1975, London in 2003, Stockholm in 2006, and Milan in 2008.

In 2019 congestion pricing arrived in New York when the legislature enacted the MTA Reform and Traffic Mobility Act. Building on years of studies, proposals, and public hearings – I testified at one of the early ones – the legislation established a tolling zone in Manhattan below 60th Street (excluding the FDR Drive and the West Side Highway).

Eighty percent of toll revenue is dedicated to capital projects within New York City (including improvements to the MTA's subway and bus service), while the remaining twenty percent is evenly divided between capital projects for the Long Island Railroad and Metro-North Railroad.

Because the congestion-pricing scheme would affect federally supported roadways, it required federal approval, which included an assessment of environmental impacts. In May 2023 the government completed an initial assessment and concluded that a more rigorous environmental review – in the form of what is known as an Environmental Impact Statement or EIS – was unnecessary.

In June 2023 it published formal approval of New York's application in the Federal Register, starting the clock for legal challenges.

In Nov. 2023 a state body authorized to determine the tolls recommended a charge of $15 for most vehicles, which the MTA adopted in March 2024. In May the MTA announced that, at long last, congestion pricing would start on June 30, 2024.

The Initial Litigation Volley And Political Flip

Lawsuits started rolling into the New York federal courts in Nov. 2023. Assigned to Liman, the initial cases (with Steptoe notably representing challengers) asserted that the federal environmental assessment did not meet the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and that the congestion-pricing program violated the United States and New York Constitutions.

By agreement of the parties, Liman decided he first would address the NEPA claims, reserving the constitutional claims for a second round.

On June 5, 2024 – three weeks after Judge Liman had heard oral argument on the NEPA claims – the first political bombshell dropped.

After decades of study, years of weathering political storms, and hundreds of millions of dollars spent preparing to implement the program, New York Governor Kathy Hochul announced that she had "directed the MTA to indefinitely pause congestion pricing." Her one-sentence press release claimed she had done so "to

Disciplinary Proceeding

The Appellate Division, First Department

Matter of Raymond Charles Osterbye, an attorney

Motion No. 2024-06253

Appellate Division, First Department

Renwick, P.J., Kern, Moulton, Gesmer, Levy, JJ.

Decided: May 29, 2025

Jorge Dopico, Chief Attorney, Attorney Grievance Committee, New York (Diana Neyman, of counsel), for petitioner

Respondent, pro se.

Per curiam—Respondent Raymond C. Osterbye was admitted to the practice of law in the State of New York by the First Judicial Department on November 18, 2002, under the name Raymond Charles Osterbye. This Court retains continuing jurisdiction over petitioner as the admitting Judicial Department (Rules for Atty Disciplinary Matters [22 NYCRR] 1240.7[a][2]).

Respondent was issued two public reprimands in New Jersey in 2020 and 2022. He did not report them to this Court or the Attorney Grievance Committee (AGC) as required by 22 NYCRR 1240.13(d).

On July 30, 2020, the Supreme Court of New Jersey (NJ Court) granted a motion for discipline by consent (Matter of Osterbye, 243 NJ 340, 234 A3d 1240 [2020]), and issued respondent a public reprimand for having violated, inter alia, NJ RPC 1.15(a)(negligent misappropriation of client funds, commingling); NJ RPC 1.15(b)(failure to properly disburse funds to a client or third party); NJ RPC 1.15(d)(failure to comply with the recordkeeping provisions of NJ Court Rule 1:21-6); and NJ RPC 8.1(b)(failure to cooperate with disciplinary authorities). Respondent was ordered to practice under the supervision of a practicing attorney approved by the New Jersey Office of Attorney Ethics (OAE) until further order of the court, to provide to OAE monthly reconciliations of his attorney accounts on a quarterly basis until further order of the court, and to complete a course in trust and business accounting approved by OAE.

On August 4, 2020, OAE sought to confirm respondent's compliance with the NJ Court order by requiring respondent to submit the name of his proposed supervising attorney within two weeks. Respondent was also required to submit his first quarterly reconciliation by November 30, 2020. After respondent failed to cooperate with OAE's requests, in December 2021, OAE filed a petition to compel respondent's compliance with the 2020 NJ Court order and sought respondent's temporary suspension due to his prolonged failure to cooperate.

In July 2022 following a decision by the Disciplinary Review Board of the Supreme Court of New Jersey (DRB), the NJ Court again publicly reprimanded respondent, this time on default, for violation of NJ RPC 1.5(b) (failure to set forth in writing the basis or rate of the attorney's fee) and NJ RPC 8.1(b) (Matter of Osterbye, 2022 NJ LEXIS 659 [2022]). The NJ Court ordered respondent to, among other things, continue to comply with the conditions of the 2020 NJ Court order. DRB reported that respondent was ordered to provide OAE with the name of a supervising attorney and all outstanding financial documents and required records by September 1, 2022. When Respondent failed to comply despite OAE's efforts, OAE filed a formal ethics complaint in June 2023 charging respondent with violation of NJ RPC 1.15(d) and NJ RPC 8.1(b).

DRB approved and certified the record filed by OAE in February 2024 and determined that the six-month suspension recommended by OAE, with conditions precedent to his reinstatement, was the appropriate discipline considering respondent's disciplinary history and lack of cooperation. OAE noted that respondent "failed to learn from his past mistakes or to use his experiences with the disciplinary system as a foundation for reform." The NJ Court so-ordered the DRB decision on July 11, 2024, and respondent was suspended from the practice of law in New Jersey for six months, effective August 21, 2024 (Matter of Osterbye, 258 NJ 179, 317 A3d 1258 [2024]).

Respondent was also suspended in New York for failure to register, in violation of Judiciary Law 468-a on November 17, 2022 (Matter of Attorneys in Violation of Judiciary Law 468-a, 211 AD3d 65 [1st Dept 2022]). Respondent was reinstated by this Court on September 19, 2024.

AGC now moves for an order, pursuant to Judiciary Law §90(2), 22 NYCRR 1240.13, and the doctrine of reciprocal discipline, finding that respondent has been disciplined by a foreign jurisdiction, directing him to demonstrate why discipline should not be imposed in New York for the misconduct underlying his discipline in New Jersey, and imposing a one year suspension, or issuing such discipline as the Court deems just and proper.

In a proceeding seeking reciprocal discipline pursuant to 22 NYCRR 1240.13, respondent may raise the following defenses: (1) lack of notice or opportunity to be heard in the foreign jurisdiction constituting a depravation of due process; (2) an infirmity of proof establishing the misconduct; or (3) that the misconduct for which the attorney was disciplined in the foreign jurisdiction does not constitute misconduct in this state (See Matter of Milara, 194 AD3d 108, 110 [1st Dept 2021]).

Respondent has no defense under 22 NYCRR 1240.13(b) as he was on notice of the misconduct allegations at issue and either consented to discipline or defaulted. Further, respondent's repeated violations of NJ RPC 1.15(d) and NJ RPC 8.1(b) would also constitute misconduct under the New York Rules of Professional Conduct (22 NYCRR) 1200.0 rule 1.15(d)(2) (maintain accurate bookkeeping records) and rule 8.4(d) (conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice).

Respondent argues, among other things, that his discipline in New Jersey was due to his failure to comply with record requests during an audit while he operated a small law office. He acknowledges that he lacked proper organizaup to $20 million for the right candidate, in line with some peers.

Under the leadership of Jeremy London, who became Skadden's executive partner in April 2024, the firm is discussing more sharp changes. London appears to be more receptive of the changes than the firm's prior leader, Eric Friedman, a source noted.

Representatives at Skadden declined to comment for this story.

Besides partner exits, Skadden has also seen publicly announced associate exits in the wake of its $100 million deal with President Trump. The Trump deal has put even more market pressure and criticism on Skadden, the first firm that appeared to pre-empt an executive order through a deal.

The latest blow came on Wednesday, when Kathleen Rubenstein, the executive director of the Skadden Foundation, which provides public interest fellowships to law graduates, publicly resigned, according to a LinkedIn post.

After recounting the work the Foundation had done over the years, Rubenstein said she felt now the firm had "fallen short" or hadn't yet "risen to the challenge" of its work. She added that she hoped Skadden would chart "a path that respects the rule of law and honors the core values of the Skadden Foundation."

The Skadden Foundation issued a statement late Wednesday thanking Rubenstein and welcoming a new interim executive director.

"We are thrilled to have Susan Plum return to the Foundation as Interim Executive Director. Having closely collaborated with Joe Flom at the Foundation's inception, Susan has been a guiding force for nearly four decades and will honor our commitment to the Foundation's enduring mission as we embark on choosing our next round of Fellows. We are grateful for Kathleen's contributions as Executive Director over the past six years and wish her the best in her future endeavors."

Structural Changes

Skadden's contemplated changes in partnership and pay, which many of its peer firms in New York have already done, would be a major shift for the firm. Few Am Law 100 firms maintain a single-tier, and some of the last remaining firms—including Debevoise & Plimpton and Ropes & Gray—are also reported to be considering a two-tier structure.

The two-tier structure has allowed firms to reserve profits only for revenue-generating partners, while allowing firms to build scale faster by adding and retaining more junior lawyers as nonequity partners.

"If you want to be competitive in the marketplace, it is no longer enough to have great clients, lawyers and history," said Mark Jungers, partner and chief strategy officer at CenterPeak. "You have to be competitive for talent. And that competition isn't just getting talent, it's keeping it."

Skadden has been slugging it out in the talent war lately. The firm lost nearly 30 people to Kirkland & Ellis earlier this year, including lawyers and business professionals, as part of Alli Brown's move in Philadelphia.

More recently, the firm saw Graham Robinson, head of Skadden's Boston office, along with partners Laura Knoll and Chade Severin, head for Kirkland, along with 15 associates. .

(In another development of the talent war between the two firms, Skadden lured a Kirkland lawyer last week, Matt Regan, who joined its Chicago office as a partner.)

The latest Skadden partner departures add to several notable exits from the firm last year, including M&A partners Mike Ringler and Peter Jones (heading for Sullivan & Cromwell), Steven Matays, formerly the head of Skadden's New York tax practice (Freshfields, Bruckhaus & Deringer) and Sven Mickisch, the co-head of its financial institutions group along with four other partners (Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett).

A look at the firm's head count over the last decade shows flat growth in New York, which, for an M&A firm, is not ideal. Specifically, Skadden's New York head count increased slightly from 634 in 2015 to 649 in 2024, while its partner count in New York decreased from 147 partners in 2015 to 126 last year. Davis Polk, for comparison, rose from 105 to 133 partners in New York over that same term. The firm's overall New York attorney head count went from 611 to 865.

Jungers said Skadden still occupies rarified air in Big Law, and that likely won't change anytime soon. The firm continues to be a heavyweight in the league tables, especially for public M&A. Last year, Skadden was No. 2 in total announced global deal value and No. 3 in the rankings for principal deal value, according to LSEG league tables.

But Jungers said the firm's actions in the coming months could well decide the talent battle.

"Skadden has the brand, and it has a strong pension," he said. "But a good brand and pension aren't enough anymore."

He added that time may be ticking on how long Skadden can avoid any changes to its compensation structure – a significant factor in the firm's retention of current talent.

"Retention is hard to put off," he said. "It comes at you fast, as in 'so and so just gave notice.' If you don't have the tools to keep them, well, you can't get them back. Then, attraction suddenly becomes very important."

Another recruiter, speaking anonymously to speak freely, said that Skadden had traditionally leaned on its client base, its history and its pension to lure candidates at compensation levels that were slightly lower than the competition. And it worked, then. "If you think about the firms that Skadden has lost talent to, they have a flexible compensation system that goes pretty high and they have a nonequity tier," the recruiter said, adding that those are the tools that Skadden historically has not had.

Skadden would be one of the latest New York law firms to tweak its compensation and partnership structure.

Over the last few years, Cravath, Swaine & Moore created a nonequity tier, after breaking its lockstep partner pay model. Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton also ditched its single-tier. Simpson Thacher & Bartlett stretched its spread, with its highest-paid partners breaching the $20 million mark, while Davis Polk & Wardwell consulted with partners about how to restructure its pay system. For its part, Weil, Gotshal & Manges revised a pay system for equity partners that emphasizes the expansion of client relationships.

tine ethical screen" of Tenreiro, court records show. BLB&G later clarified that the ex-SEC employee accepted an offer of employment from the law firm contingent on the court's approval of the screening procedures, according to the opinion and order.

Historically, Tenreiro was employed by the SEC from December 2013 to April 2025. Between October 2022 and November 2024, he secured several rulings against prominent digital asset companies as the deputy chief of the SEC's Crypto Assets and Cyber Unit. In December 2024, Tenreiro was promoted to the agency's chief litigation counsel.

During Tenreiro's tenure as chief litigation counsel, the SEC sued Musk in connection with his purchase of Twitter shares. Tenreiro claimed that he did not "substantively participate in the SEC investigation" or any related matter.

The SEC under the Biden administration had drastically different priorities regarding digital assets than the agency does now under the Trump administration. Digital asset companies, which donated hundreds of millions of dollars to the Trump campaign, urged the new administration to remove staff from the SEC who had pursued cases against the companies, largely for the sale of unregistered securities on cryptocurrency exchanges.

In January, Tenreiro began looking for outside work and was transferred to the IT department before his departure from the agency. The next month, an ex-classmate of Tenreiro's connected him to BLB&G, and Tenreiro claimed that he first became aware of the law firm being counsel in the underlying case in mid-March.

And in the opinion and order, Gorenstein found that the conflict check—which included Tenreiro identifying the cases brought by the law firm and ones connected to the SEC, and a consultation from a "professional legal ethics expert"—was sufficient under the Code of Professional Responsibility.

"For similar reasons, we find that Tenreiro's 'likes' of social media posts do not create an appearance of impropriety, particularly since the posts have nothing to do with the SEC enforcement action against Musk or the instant litigation," Gorenstein ruled. "Accordingly, we conclude that BLB&G's screening procedures cure Tenreiro's conflict of interest."

Neither the plaintiffs nor the defendants responded to a request for comment.

Gerard Filitti, senior counsel in New York at the Lawfare Project, an international nonprofit legal think tank and litigation fund, characterized the ruling as refuting an attempt to limit the employment of lawyers leaving government service—in essence, attempts to "punish" them by restricting their ability to join firms that "do work even remotely related to their government service."

"These attempts don't just presuppose that former government lawyers don't understand, and can't abide by, the rules of ethics," Filitti observed. "They play into a popular perception of lawyers as unethical beings that can't be trusted, and give credit to a growing perception in some political circles that government service irrevocably taints the people who perform it. This is inherently dangerous, not just for the legal profession, but for the justice system."

'Saving Statute'

commenced within six months of the dismissal of the previous action, the third action 'would have been timely commenced at the time of commencement of' the second action because, as a result of CPLR 205(a), the second action was timely," the court said on Wednesday. "The fact that the second action was timely only as a result of the operation of CPLR 205(a) does not detract from the fact that it was, in fact, timely."

Tumminia is represented by Jeffrey Adams of Adams Law Firm. He didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

The court's position is the opposite of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, which found in its 2021 decision, Ray v. Ray, that letting plaintiffs refile cases under the Savings Statute more than once would allow them to bring their cases "in perpetuity," completely undermining the statute of limitations.

Noting that it isn't bound by the circuit, the state appeals court said that interpretation would be inequitable for Tumminia. Since December 2021, Tumminia has been suing the nursing home and hospital that treated his wife, who passed away in September 2019. The defendants are represented by Mauro Lilling Naparty and Lewis Brisbois Bisgaard & Smith, whose attorneys didn't respond to requests for comment.

A state court dismissed the case twice, as a court in Richmond County had yet to fully process Tumminia's application, submitted in June 2021, for letters of administration, which he needed to act as his wife's personal representative.

"There may be situations where a plaintiff is unable to obtain letters of administration within six months through no fault of his own. In such a situation, it would be inequitable for an action to become barred by the statute of limitations," the court said.

It pointed out that other causes of action, including those against municipalities, have "very short statutes of limitations."

The state appeals court found further backing for its reading in legislative history. In 2022, state legislators passed the Foreclosure Abuse Prevention Act, which included a provision amending the Saving Statute to specify that it would no longer apply to foreclosure actions. Plaintiffs who file those cases will instead be governed by CPLR 205-a, which offers a similar six-month refiling period, but specifies that "in no event shall the original plaintiff receive more than one six-month extension," the court pointed out.

"The fact that the legislature included this language in CPLR 205-a but not in CPLR 205(a) is further evidence that it did not intend for a plaintiff to be limited to one six-month extension under CPLR 205(a)," it said.

Jury Bias in Cross-Racial ID In Criminal Cases

By Glenn F. Hardy

As we are all too aware, misidentification is a primary factor of wrongful convictions; The Innocence Project maintains that 60 percent of their clients were wrongfully convicted based on eyewitness misidentification while The Montana Innocence Project notes that 42 percent of wrongful convictions are based on misidentifications specifically due to the cross racial effect.

The courts, relying on science and experience, have sought to address this wrong through the use of mid-trial jury instructors and formal jury charges regarding cross racial eyewitness testimony and the defendant. But should not juries be instructed on the fact that there may be issues with the juror's consideration of identification where there is cross-racial identification between the defendant and the jury members?

The Science

The Cross Racial Effect (CRE), or the inaccuracies of cross racial identification cuts across racial lines and is caused by basic factors. "Through decades of experimentation, psychologists have found two basic causes for the CRE—first, many people have a lack of experience with cross-race faces, and second, many people tend to think of others in terms of labels (or categories) rather than as individuals, failing to look past the category to the unique individual." (Wilson, J, Hugenberg, K, and Bernstein, M. (2013).

The first cause, the lack of experience, is in turn, based on two theories. The first theory, configuration processing, deals with how the brain processes faces. By having greater contact with one's own race, configuration processing allows for greater efficiency in extracting same race facial information over cross race facial identifiers. Same race facial characteristics, such as the location of eyes relative to the nose and mouth, are more easily remembered due to the increased contact. The individual sees same race faces as a unified whole. (Töredi, D.; Mansour, J. K.; Jones, S. E.; Skelton, F.; McIntyre, A., (2025) citing (Fallshore, M., & Schooler, J. W. (1995). Due to the lack of experience, cross racial faces are identified not by a unified whole but by individualized features which are less effective for distinguishing between individuals.

The second theory is that one has a greater library of same race faces in one's memory, "this biases the memory in such a way that same race faces are more easily discriminated from one another." (Valentine, T., & Endo, M. (1992). A norm is encoded based on past experiences with faces, and as those experiences are more typical with the same race, one accesses a greater catalogue to compare facial characteristics.

> Should the jury not then be made aware and charged that their own biases and prejudices regarding identification may affect their decision making?

With cross race faces, the lack of a library results in a "cluster" of cross race faces outside the "norm," and as an event activates the "cluster," the lack of detail in the cluster results in a lesser degree of discrimination. (Wilson, J, Hugenberg, K, and Bernstein, M., January (2013). supra.

The second cause, categorical thinking, is the concept that people simply categorize others, it is "automatic, pervasive and occurs spontaneously" (Macrae, C. N., & Bodenhausen, G. V. (2000). and is based on "salient characteristics, such as age, sex and race" (Ito & Urland, (2003). This applies to faces with the effect that it "make[s] faces that belong to the same category seem to blend together." (Wilson, J, Hugenberg, K, and Bernstein, M., 2013) supra.

Numerous studies have concluded that "perceived membership in a social category drives perceptions of and processing of faces. In many cases, this differential processing results in worse recognition for racial and ethnic out-group members." Id.

Further, studies have shown that "out group" members are not relevant, and therefore unnecessary to process and take note of. A simple example is that a childless couple will take little note of toddler's facial characteristics until they too have a child. Attention to "out group" members prior to their relevancy leads to less effective identification.

The Courts

Recognizing the science and the need to stem cross racial misidentifications, in 2017, the New York Court of Appeals held "in a case in which a witness's identification of the defendant is at issue, and the identifying witness and defendant appear to be of different races, a trial court is required to give, upon request, during final instructions, a jury charge on the cross-race effect, instructing (1) that the jury should consider whether there is a difference in race between the defendant and the witness who identified the defendant, and (2) that, if so, the jury should consider (a) that some people have greater difficulty in accurately identifying members of a different race than in accurately identifying members of their own race and (b) whether the difference in race affected the accuracy of the witness's identification. People v. Boone 30 N.Y.3d 521. New York courts have routinely upheld this decision.

Then in January 2018, the Criminal Jury Instructions involving identification were revised to reflect the holding in Boone. Under "Identification One Witness" and requires a defendant to have a certain level of connection with a forum to establish a court's personal jurisdiction over that defendant.

The high court criticized the Ninth Circuit for embracing a "strange statutory argument" and a selective reading of the FSIA's legislative history.

"To the extent that some or all FSIA exceptions satisfy International Shoe, it is only because the exceptions Congress wrote happen to meet that standard, not because [the FSIA] secretly incorporated our jurisdictional due-process cases," Alito wrote.

The Supreme Court declined to reach Antrix's additional argument that subjecting it to suit in U.S. courts would violate the Fifth Amendment's guarantee of due process.

Notably, the U.S. government took the position that "foreign states are not persons for constitutional purposes" and thus not protected by the Fifth Amendment. To hold otherwise "carries immense foreign relations concerns," a government lawyer argued during a March hearing in the case before the Supreme Court.

The high court also declined to weigh in on whether the plaintiffs have shown that one of FSIA's enumerated exceptions to sovereign immunity applies.

The petitioners are seeking to pursue the litigation under the FSIA exception for confirming arbitration awards, asserting Antrix has waived any argument to the contrary.

"We decline to answer those questions today," Alito wrote.

The investors were represented by Matthew McGill of Gibson Dunn.

Devas was represented by Aaron Streett of Baker Botts.

Antrix was represented by Carter Phillips of Sidley Austin.

The Supreme Court rendered its decision in CC Devas (Mauritius) v. Antrix, No. 23-1201.

SCOTUS Says Reverse-Discrimination Plaintiffs Don't Need To Meet Higher Bar

A unanimous U.S. Supreme Court held Thursday that straight and white plaintiffs alleging reverse discrimination do not have to meet a higher burden than minority plaintiffs under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The justices threw out a federal appeals court decision rejecting the discrimination claim from a former program administrator at the Ohio Department of Youth Services, who says she was denied a promotion and replaced because she is a straight woman. The jobs ultimately went to two gay employees.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit had held that Marlean Ames had not demonstrated the "background circumstances support[ing] the suspicion that [DYS] is that unusual employer who discriminates against the majority." Specifically, Ames failed to show a statistical pattern of similar sexual orientation discrimination or that the employment decisions were made by the gay community.

The Supreme Court agreed with Ames that the Sixth Circuit unfairly required her to make evidentiary showings beyond what's required of minority-group plaintiffs.

Justice Ketanji Brown Jackson authored the opinion for the court. Justice Clarence Thomas wrote a concurrence joined by Justice Neil Gorsuch.

"The Sixth Circuit has implemented a rule that requires certain Title VII plaintiffs—those who are members of majority groups—to satisfy a heightened evidentiary standard in order to carry their burden," Jackson wrote. "We conclude that Title VII does not impose such a heightened standard on majority-group plaintiffs."

The decision is likely to make it easier for straight and white plaintiffs to allege reverse discrimination in the workplace amid a wave of litigation over diversity, equity, and inclusion policies seeking to boost the representation of individuals from historically disadvantaged groups in business, the academy and government.

In its decision, the Supreme Court said it was leaving it to the lower courts to decide whether Ohio can defeat Ames' reverse-discrimination claims without the now-scuttled "background circumstances" rule.

Ohio has argued that Ames was "difficult to work with" and the DYS had "nondiscriminatory" reasons for choosing another candidate for the promotion and replacing her with someone else. The state insisted that the chosen candidates were qualified for their positions and management had no knowledge of Ames' sexual orientation or that of an employee who benefited from the alleged discrimination.

Thomas' separate concurrence raised concerns with the court's current Title VII jurisprudence as laid out in its 1973 McDonnell Douglas v. Green decision. Thomas, who chaired the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in the late 1980s, called the decision's "three-step framework" for analyzing discrimination claims a "[j]udge-made doctrin[e]" that "lacks any basis in the text of Title VII and has proved difficult for courts to apply.

The Supreme Court rendered its decision in Ames v. Ohio Department of Youth Services, No. 23-1039.

Global Report

Norton Rose Fulbright Integrates Australia Into Europe, Middle East and Asia Group

BY CHRISTOPHER NIESCHE AND JESSICA SEAH

NORTON Rose Fulbright is set to integrate its Australian practice with its Europe, Middle East and Asia (EMEA) offering, merging its financial pots following a global management reshuffling last year.

The integration will take effect from July 1, Norton Rose said in a statement. The firm's other financial centres, including its U.S. and African revenues, are to remain separate.

The combined $1 billion business will have more than 1,800 lawyers, including over 400 partners, across 28 offices in 18 jurisdictions. According to Norton Rose's website, it now counts just over 340 lawyers in six Australian offices.

According to two people with knowledge of the matter, formal discussions regarding its financial integration began last year. A source at the firm in Australia said the partners had "overwhelmingly" voted in favour of integration.

'Huge Potential'

An Australian partner said that the move has "huge potential" and was well supported in Australia. The integration will also give the local arm the financial firepower to hire "big name laterals".

"When you get financial integration there just seems to be more work that comes through other people in the network who are prepared to reach out to the Australian arm of the business and get them involved in international matters," the partner said. "This will really be the next step where we can give clients better access to the international network."

Norton Rose said the integration would help it build on existing strengths.

"This represents an exciting milestone for our business and one that fulfils a long-held ambition. Through this full integration, we will enhance our offering to clients, unlock new opportunities for our people and streamline investment across Asia Pacific to build our firm for the future," Peter Scott, global and EMEA managing partner, said in a statement today.

DIEGO M. RADZINSCHI/ALM

Norton Rose Fulbright is to merge its Australian and EMEA financial operations following partner approval, aiming to boost hiring power and align with recent global leadership changes.

Lifting Partner Pay

"Our EMEA and Australian businesses have many complementary practice strengths and share deep sector experience, having worked closely together to support international clients for many years," Alison Deitz, Australia chief executive partner, added. "This is a natural step in our evolution and one that will increase our agility, scale and growth potential in the Asia Pacific region."

Norton Rose is a product of several firm mergers over the past two decades. Its Australian presence was formed through a merger with Deacons Australia in 2010, and then with domestic firm Henry Davis York in 2017.

The Australian practice has taken some time to settle, having suffered mass exodus in 2020 and 2021 with queries on whether its new leadership can manage and iron out its issues. Part of the problem was its inability to attract strong talent with the remuneration it was offering. According to a partner who spoke about its financial integration, the merger will eventually help lift partner pay.

Over the last two years, the firm has worked to rebuild its practice on the ground and has hired partners from local firms such as Lander & Rogers and Holding Redlich and fellow Verein firm Squire Patton Boggs. Over the past 20 years, it has also merged with legacy American firms Fulbright & Jaworski and Chadbourne & Parke, in turn securing a strong projects, energy and oil and gas foothold in the U.S. In 2016, Norton Rose also merged with Canadian firm Bull Housser & Tupper.

Global Leadership Structure

In 2023, Norton Rose's former Australia chair Scott Atkins became its global chair. Last year, the firm also changed its global leadership structure following the abrupt departure of former global chief executive officer Gerry Pecht in the U.S. As part of that restructuring, U.S. and EMEA managing partners Jeff Cody and Peter Scott became co-global managing partners. Deitz, who was appointed CEO in Australia in 2020, retains her leading role.

Norton Rose' presence in Europe includes its headquarters in London, Germany, Luxembourg, France, Italy and the Netherlands. In the Middle East, it has offices in Dubai and Riyadh. In Asia, it has offices in Shanghai, Beijing, Jakarta, Hong Kong, Singapore, Tokyo and Bangkok.

Without a fully integrated single profit pool, sprawling Swiss Verein firms can often be unwieldy. Other massive Verein firms include Dentons, DLA Piper and Baker McKenzie. Last year, Law.com International reported on Baker McKenzie's attempts at merging its Australian practice with its Asia group, an attempt that failed as it was reportedly voted down by its Australian partners.

Taylor Wessing Becomes Latest Firm To Roll Out Swedish AI Tool

BY HABIBA CULLEN-JAFAR
LONDON

TAYLOR Wessing has become the latest law firm to partner with Sweden-based legal AI platform Legora.

The firm has confirmed that following a successful pilot involving "more than 80 lawyers" across multiple offices, the tool will now be rolled out firmwide.

The tool, which assists lawyers in a number of ways including by automating analysis, enhancing due diligence, and offering drafting support, has been adopted by a growing pool of firms including Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton, Goodwin Procter, Addleshaw Goddard and Bird & Bird as law firms seek to harness the potentials of AI.

Commenting on the development, U.K. corporate head Emma Danks said: ""This partnership with Legora is a transformational step forward in how we use technology to enhance the way we work and the service we provide to our clients. After assisting Legora at the outset with their set-up in 2023, it is brilliant that we have begun to utilise the AI itself. It's an exciting development that supports our broader strategy of combining legal expertise with the best tools available."

The latest partnership comes only weeks after the company, previously known as Leya,had announced an $80 million series B funding round.

Legora's head of UK&I, Alex Fortescue-Webb, said: "Our partnership with Taylor Wessing represents a shift in how we think about empowering lawyers and accelerating the adoption of AI within law firms. They are clear that AI is an integral part of the firm's future, and a key lever in how they will continue to maintain and extend the exceptional service they provide to their clients. It's an honour to be trusted as a key partner on this journey and to collaborate so closely with them to bring further enhancements to the Legora platform."

Clifford Chance Spain Boosts Team With Trio of Star Partner Hires

BY RICK MITCHELL
MADRID

CLIFFORD Chance has hired the head of Deloitte's legal outpost in Spain as a partner for its commercial litigation and regulatory investigations practice based in Madrid.

María Guinot will join Clifford Chance in the coming weeks. She arrives after close to six years as a partner at Deloitte Legal Spain, where she also leads the regulatory department. Guinot, with more than 20 years of experience, is also a senior state attorney on a leave of absence. She's the third partner Clifford Chance has hired from Big Law rivals in the last month, after picking up partners from Linklaters and Pinsent Masons.

"María joins at an excellent time for our practice in Spain, which is building on sustained growth," Fernando Irurzun, head of litigation & dispute resolution in Spain said in a statement. "Her wide experience and market reputation will prove invaluable for our clients."

COURTESY PHOTOS

Clifford Chance Spain has strengthened its regulatory and litigation practices with three key partner hires from top rival firms in the past month. From left, Amaia Rivas, Maria Guinott and Gabriel Cabello.

Matthew Newick, Clifford Chance's global head of litigation and dispute resolution said Guinot's "track record in commercial litigation and regulatory investigations, particularly in the financial services sector, will no doubt provide us with a significant competitive advantage in the Spanish market."

Clifford Chance said it foresees increased demand for specialist advice, particularly among leading financial institutions, "Maria has a wealth of experience with these clients, which is complemented by her strong profile in investigations."

Guinot's roles as a state attorney included director of regulation and compliance at SAREB, a public entity that manages and liquidates impaired assets, such as loans and real estate, from financial institutions requiring public aid, Clifford Chance said.

She earlier spent about five years as a partner at CMS' Spain branch, where she led the regulated sectors practice. She has experience with public authorities and regulated sectors including finance, energy, telecommunications, and infrastructure. Deloitte declined to comment.

In May, Clifford Chance Spain announced that Linklaters' real estate partner Gabriel Cabello would join as a partner. It said Pinsent Masons partner Amaia Rivas, a former state attorney specializing in investor-state disputes, would also join as a partner in its litigation & dispute resolution team focusing on international arbitration.

Cabello join Clifford Chance next week and Rivas in the next couple of weeks.

Pinsent Masons and Linklaters thanked Rivas and Cabello and wished them well.

BY JESSICA SEAH
HONG KONG

EMPLOYMENT-focused firm Seyfarth Shaw is closing its office in Shanghai, where it employs three partners who are also based in the firm's U.S. and Hong Kong offices.

It also employs three associates in Shanghai who are based there full-time.

The firm also counts three partners for its Shanghai office although all three are also based in the firm's U.S. and Hong Kong offices. According to a Seyfarth spokesperson, the firm's Shanghai managing partner Raymond Wong, a corporate and commercial lawyer, will continue on in the firm's Hong Kong office.

"As part of our ongoing strategic review to ensure we are best positioned to serve our clients globally, we have made the decision to close our Shanghai office later this year," the firm said in a statement. "We remain committed to supporting our clients with needs in Mainland China and will do so by consolidating our presence and refocusing our resources in our Hong Kong office. We look forward to continuing to provide the innovative solutions our clients need to navigate the region's dynamic and evolving landscape."

The Chicago-based firm launched its Shanghai office in 2013, then hiring former DLA Piper partner Wan Li as its new office managing partner. Li is still at the firm, based also in the firm's Hong Kong office, which opened in 2017 with the hire of another former DLA Piper partner—Julia Gorham.

In Hong Kong, the firm's only other Asia office, the firm counts 13 lawyers, including two partners based full-time in the city, one of whom is former Lewis Silkin's Hong Kong managing partner, Kathryn Weaver.

The team in Hong Kong advises on all aspects of employment matters as well as corporate, capital markets and corporate governance.

kept in proper fashion?' It's almost like an incantation, and then the records go into evidence."

Every flight of a live witness to authenticate business records, Warshawer said, costs north of $2,000. On average, three live witnesses are transported per week, though that could go up or down.

"You're talking about well over 100 times a year that we're doing this," he said of his office.

The law has been updated in the past to allow certain records to be introduced this way, such as allowing records proving the name or address of a bank account holder to be introduced via affidavit. But the amendments have been piecemeal.

"If I wanted to do the same thing for a Facebook account, I can't, because that didn't exist when the statute was drafted," he said. "There's no rhyme or reason."

Warshawer said there are arguments available that the account-level data is admissible under the same provision, because it's not clear that case law says yes or no, but a bill would be more efficient than litigation each case.

This is not just a white-collar issue, he said.

Warshawer gave an example of a recent violent crime case, involving rideshare records, which he noted are now used quite frequently in violent crimes.

"If I want to prove you paid Uber with a credit card, I can get that record in," he said. "If I want the record of where your Uber went, I can't."

"We had a recent, very violent case where one of the critical pieces of evidence was a rideshare trip from point A to point B," he explained. "The rideshare company in question fought us tooth and nail to get somebody here, even though they operate fairly close by, and insisted on us bringing somebody from very far outside the state because of this rule."

Warshawer said he didn't blame the company for their resistance to it, but noted that approximately eight hours were spent between himself and the line prosecutor trying to track down a representative to appear.

In the violent crime example, he posited that he and others devoted a combined eight hours on the phone attempting to track down a representative instead of doing other critical casework.

Warshawer said he wasn't aware of any opposition from the defense bar.

"This is a bill that seeks to impact the grand jury process, which definition, somebody is going to get the right to challenge later," he stated. "Nobody's allowing the records in as a final determination of guilt or innocence."

A random assortment of criminal defense attorneys polled by the New York Law Journal said they had not known about the bill, but that they could not see any specific objection to the bill.

Though, as Mark Zauderer of Dorf Nelson & Zauderer noted: "Defense lawyers are generally opposed to any measures that make prosecutions easier."

including murder as an act of terrorism for the December 2024 shooting of United Healthcare CEO Brian Thompson as he headed to an investor conference.

Mangione was charged in a federal complaint in December, but not indicted by the Southern District of New York until April. He has pleaded not guilty in both cases.

In the reply, prosecutors said Mangione's actions terrified the entire health care industry, as was his intention. The submissions include portions of the alleged shooter's private journal, in which he writes that an executive's murder would publicize the industry's greed and terrify investors and financial analysts.

Call centers were inundated with death threats, the motion states. Executives quit their jobs. One health care executive, prosecutors say, dyed her hair and moved to a temporary home after receiving a threat.

"All of these writings convey one clear message: that the murder of Brian Thompson was intended to bring about revolutionary change to the healthcare industry," the motion states.

While the defense team argued the evidence presented to grand jurors was insufficient to establish the murder as terrorism charge, prosecutors argue the plain meaning of the statute encompasses single-victim murders.

The filing cites the 1997 Empire State Building shooting and the 1994 Brooklyn Bridge shooting, which were also motivated by hatred. One individual was shot and killed in those attacks, though they differ from Thompson's murder in that he died on a deserted Manhattan sidewalk and those shootings happened in bustling, crowd-filled locations.

In their motion, Mangione's attorneys say the dual prosecution created a "legal quagmire" and that the federal case must proceed first because the concurrent prosecutions violate his constitutional rights.

But prosecutors call that a "disingenuous" attempt to kill the state's case.

"Any stall or delay of the state case as proposed in these circumstances appears to be a defense effort seeking the delay and eventual death of a prosecution case via disfavored 'calendar control' on a de facto reserve docket when the prosecution is ready," the filing alleges.

Mangione could face a maximum sentence of life imprisonment on the state charges. U.S. Attorney General Pam Bondi has said the Department of Justice will seek the death penalty.

He is due back in state court on June 26, when Carro is expected to rule on the motion to dismiss.

Mangione is represented in both matters by Karen Friedman Agnifilo, Marc Agnifilo and Jacob Kaplan of Agnifilo Intrater.

Learned counsel in the federal matter is Avraham Moskowitz, founding partner of Moskowitz Colson Ginsberg & Schulman.

Proposals in the state legislature to update New York's town and village courts are necessary steps towards bringing the system into the 21st century, the chair of New York State Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers' justice courts committee writes.

Lawyer Justices Are Needed Now In Town and Village Courts

BY GREG LUBOW

The New York Law Journal article "Not Just Fences: Lawmaker Says Weight of Legal Matters in Justice Courts Requires Widening Pool of Candidates," published on May 2, once again brings to the fore the continuing use of non-lawyer justices in the town and village courts throughout upstate New York and eastern Suffolk County. Nearly 60% of the more than 2,000 local magistrates are not lawyers.

In People v. Charles F., 60 NY2d 474 [1983], New York Court of Appeals Judge Judith A. Kaye, writing in dissent (joined by Chief Judge Lawrence H. Cooke and future Chief Judge Sol Wachtler) on the constitutionality of New York's history of allowing non-lawyer judges to preside over criminal trials said, "The right to effective assistance of counsel and the right to trial by jury, both so jealously guarded, lose force without a law-trained judge to insure that motions are disposed of in accordance with the law, that evidentiary objections are property ruled on, and that the jury is correctly instructed. A lay person, regardless of his educational qualifications or experience, is not a constitutionally acceptable substitute for a member of the Bar." (quoting People v. Felder, 47 NY2d 287, 293 [1979] (right to law-trained counsel].

In the four decades since her prescient words have only gained in their logic and constitutional analysis. Local court practice has become exceedingly more complex in both the civil and criminal areas. So much so that the upcoming changes to criminal discovery were prompted by prosecutors complaining that local magistrates did not understand the law and were applying it incorrectly. This is not about good "lay" people trying their best—it is about providing a system of justice and constitutional due process, in both appearance and actuality, where all who come before the court know that the person hearing their case is properly law-trained and sufficiently experienced in the law to understand the issues and apply the law.

> Litigants have a right to have their legal arguments heard and decided by a law-educated judge.

In 2023 and 2024, the State Senate passed Sen. Sean Ryan's bill that would mandate that justices in the 100 busiest (by arraignments) justice courts be attorneys admitted at least five years, while allowing sitting "lay" justices to continue to run for re-election, (S1409/A5787 [Rajkumar]). This bill has the broad support of the Office of Court Administration, the District Attorney's Association of the State of New York, the New York State Bar Association, the New York State Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. The legislature should pass this bill this session.

In addition, Assembly Member Jennifer Lunsford's bill (A964A/S7676 [Hoylman-Sigal]) would expand the geographic area from which local court justices may be elected from the limiting confines of each town or village out to the assembly district boundary. This would allow more attorneys the opportunity to run for town or village court justice. There is already legislative precedent to look beyond a municipal boundary to find attorneys to be judges. Uniform City Court Act §2104 allows any attorney residing within a county (and in some cases within two counties) to be elected as a city court judge for some designated small cities.

These bills are necessary steps towards bringing New York's colonial-era justice court system into the 21st century.

Finally, complaints to and decisions of the Commission on Judicial Conduct against lay justices may make headlines but are, in reality, a red herring which diverts attention from the real issue—litigants have a right to have their legal arguments heard and decided by a law-educated judge. The commission does not address a judge's legal competency, only their ethical lapses or poor court operations.

GREG D. LUBOW is chair of the New York State Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers' justice courts committee.

Judicial Ethics

Opinions From the Advisory Committee on Judicial Ethics

The Advisory Committee on Judicial Ethics responds to written inquiries from New York state's approximately 3,600 judges and justices, as well as hundreds of judicial hearing officers, support magistrates, court attorney-referees, and judicial candidates (both judges and non-judges seeking election to judicial office). The committee interprets the Rules Governing Judicial Conduct (22 NYCRR Part 100) and, to the extent applicable, the Code of Judicial Conduct. The committee consists of 28 current and retired judges, and is co-chaired by the Honorable Debra L. Givens, an acting justice of the supreme court in Erie County, and the Honorable Lillian Wan, an associate justice of the appellate division, second department.

Opinion: 25-06(B)

Digest: (1) A new judge may hire a law student who previously interned at the judge's prior law firm as a judicial intern.

(2) If, while the judge is already under an obligation to disqualify in matters involving the law firm, the judge wishes to provide an opportunity for remittal of disqualification, the judge may disclose both his/her own prior connection to the firm and the judicial intern's, and allow the parties and their counsel to consider whether or not they wish to remit the judge's disqualification. However, if the judge learns that the intern was personally involved with a matter at the law firm, the intern should be insulated from that matter, and such insulation cannot be waived or remitted.

Rules: Judiciary Law § 14; 22 NYCRR 100.2; 100.2(A); 100.2(B); 100.3(C)(2); 100.3(E)(1); 100.3(F); 100.4(A)(1)-(3); Opinions 22-181; 21-22(A); 20-40; 19-82; 18-118; 18-46; 16-36; 14-48; 13-80.

Opinion: A new full-time judge asks if he/she may permit a law student who previously interned at the judge's former law firm to serve as an intern in the judge's chambers.

A judge must always avoid even the appearance of impropriety (see 22 NYCRR 100.2) and must always promote public confidence in the judiciary's integrity and impartiality (see 22 NYCRR 100.2[A]). A judge must not allow family, social, political or other relationships to influence the judge's judicial conduct or judgment (see 22 NYCRR 100.2[B]) and must require the judge's staff to observe the standards of fidelity and diligence that apply to the judge (see 22 NYCRR 100.3[C][2]). Further, the judge must disqualify from any proceeding in which the judge's impartiality "might reasonably be questioned" (see 22 NYCRR 100.3[E][1]), including where expressly required by rule or law (see e.g. Judiciary Law § 14).

Preliminarily, we note that judges are disqualified from presiding in any case involving their prior law firm or its attorney(s) until two years have passed after the completion of any financial relationship between the judge and the law firm (see e.g. Opinions 18-118; 18-46; 16-36; 22 NYCRR 100.3[E][1]). Assuming the judge can be fair and impartial, the disqualification is subject to remittal after full disclosure on the record (see Opinion 18-118; 22 NYCRR 100.3[F]). As noted in Opinion 21-22(A), where a judge has a disqualifying conflict, it is not the parties' burden to request the judge's disqualification. Rather, it is the judge's burden to disqualify him/herself at the outset, even if the parties are fully aware of the conflict and do not express any concern (see id.). Moreover, where remittal is available, it is a multi-step process which likewise puts the burden on the judge (1) to make full disclosure of the basis for disqualification on the record and (2) not preside unless the parties and their counsel freely and affirmatively consent to waive the conflict, as specified in Section 100.3(F) and our prior opinions (see id.). A mere failure to object is insufficient (see id.).

Turning now to the question at hand, the decision whether to engage a student intern is within the discretion of the judge and does not generally raise ethical concerns. Indeed, where the internship is unpaid, we have advised that the anti-nepotism rule does not apply (see Opinion 14-48 [judge may hire third-degree relative as unpaid intern]). Where a conflict arises in a particular case due to the intern's outside activities or relationships, it is ordinarily sufficient to disclose the connection and insulate the intern (see e.g. Opinions 22-181; 13-80).

In our view, the inquiring judge may hire a law student who previously interned at the judge's prior law firm as a judicial intern.

One unusual factor here is that this new judge proposes to hire an intern from his/her former law firm, while the judge is already disqualified from hearing matters involving that law firm. During this period, the judge may, » Page 7

Jury Bias

"Identification- Witness Plus" the optional paragraph was added:

> You should consider whether there is a difference in race between the defendant and the witness who identified the defendant, and if so, you should consider that some people have greater difficulty in accurately identifying members of a different race than in accurately identifying members of their own race, and therefore, you should consider whether the difference in race affected the accuracy of the witness's identification.

Understanding the import of the cross racial issue, as recently as October 2024, the Appellate Division Third Department in Alexander, overturned a conviction and remanded the matter back to County Court for its failure to issue a cross racial identification charge. There, the surveillance video was murky as to identification as the suspect was not looking at the camera and wore a baseball cap was hiding part of his face.

An officer of a different race, who knew the defendant from previous arrests and arrested the defendant sometime after the incident, testified as to identification. The defense asked for the cross racial charge but was denied.

The Third Department held that while the officer's identification may have been needed to assist the jury, thus meeting Mosley standards, the trial court erred in not applying a cross-racial identification jury instruction upon defendant's request for same. People v. Alexander, 231 AD3d 1310.

In People v. Perdue, the Court of Appeals discussed the need to provide defense counsel with notice of a potential in-court identification as soon as practical. Judge Rivera, in her dissent, argued that protective measures need to be taken for the defendant, including allowing the defense the use of an expert witness for identification issues, especially those invoking cross racial identification.

Judge Rivera acknowledged that "while jurors may be familiar from their own experience with factors relevant to the reliability of eyewitness observation and identification it cannot be said that psychological studies regarding the accuracy of an identification are within the ken of the typical juror." Perdue, citing People v. Lee 96 NY 2d 157. This begs the question, should not this principal apply to juror's themselves?

Clearly, if there are issues in the cross racial identification by a witness of the defendant, that in turn raises the question of whether jurors themselves are biased in the identification of a defendant, and whether they too should be apprised of the psychological studies and warned of how their bias may affect the accuracy of their identification. How are jurors any less biased than a witness, in particular, a lay witness as in a Mosley situation. People v. Mosley 41 NY3d 640.

On May 5, 2025, the court addressed this issue in People v. Kevin Hardiman, Indictment 70519-21, tried before Hon. Ann Scherzer, Part 93, Manhattan Supreme Court. No eyewitness testified as to the defendant's characteristics other than race, height, and weight. The defendant himself had been removed from the courtroom due to disciplinary issues, so the jury did not have a view of him.

A Mosley witness, who had interacted with the defendant a dozen times and the same race as the defendant, testified the still photo taken from a video of the incident was the defendant. At closing, the DA compared the still photo to the arrest photos before the jury.

The jury then had to determine, with the opinion of the Mosley witness, if the still photo matched the arrest photo, and was therefore the defendant. The jury was made up of mixed races; the defendant was African American. After significant discussion, the court agreed to charge the jury as follows:

> If any member of the jury thinks it is appropriate to do so, you may consider whether the defendant is of a different race than you are, and if so, if that has any bearing on the reception or accuracy of the identification.(Tr. 346-347, ln. 24-3)

The court did not charge as the defense requested, "that some people have had greater difficulty of accurately identifying people of other races" as the defense had not put on expert. However, the expert would have testified regarding witness cross race identification, of which there was none, not juror cross race bias.

'Mosley'

In Mosley, the identification of the defendant was not based on an eyewitness, but rather by a detective who viewed a video, testified he knew the defendant from "canvassing," and opined that the person in the video was in fact, Mr. Mosley. People v. Mosley 41 NY3d 640.

While the Court of Appeals ruled there is a two-part test in allowing a layperson's opinion as to identification. First, the court must determine whether "the witness has had sufficient contact with the defendant to achieve a level of familiarity that renders the lay opinion helpful" Mosley citing United States v. Fulton 837 F. 3d 282 (3rd Cir. 2016) citing United States v. Beck 418 F.3d 1008 (9th Circuit 2005).

The second prong is whether "the jury needs the witness's assistance" Mosley, citing Fulton, supra. The court does not want the witness to usurp "the province of the jury to draw [its] own conclusions regarding the identity of the person depicted without the witness's assistance" Mosely citing Commonwealth v. Vacher, 469 Mass 425.

Therein lies the issue. Unlike the Identification - One Witness or Identification Witness Plus charge in which there is an option to submit a cross racial charge, there is none attached to the Identification via Video or Photo by Non-eyewitness Charge stemming from Mosley. The charge allows the jury to accept or reject the Mosley witness' opinion, but the jury must still determine whether the video/still photo matches the identity of the defendant. Yet juries are made up of a variety of races, White, Hispanic, Asian, Black. The jury in essence, becomes the identification witness, and the cross racial effect factors discussed above would come into play.

Should the jury not then be made aware and charged that their own biases and prejudices regarding identification may affect their decision making and that experts in the field have determined that people tend to confuse faces that belong to other races? A possible charge could be as follows:

> Clearly, if there are issues in the cross racial identification by a witness of the defendant, that in turn raises the question of whether jurors themselves are biased in the identification of a defendant.

> Previous research has shown that people reliably show what is known as the Cross-Race Effect (CRE) when learning faces. Basically, people tend to confuse faces that belong to other races. For example, a White learner will tend to mistake on Black face for another. Now that you know this, we would like you to try especially hard when learning faces in this case that happen to be of a different race. Do your best to try to pay close attention to what differentiates one particular face from another face of the same race, especially when that face is not of the same race as you. Remember, pay very close attention to the faces, especially when they are of a different race than you in order to try to avoid this Cross-Race Effect.
> (Hugenberg, K., Miller, J., & Claypool, H. M. (2007)).

Certainly, a charge like the one above would put the jury on notice that they, as the decision makers, and in effect, the identification witness, need to take extra care in determining the identification of the defendant. It is time to take the bias out of the box.

clear that the Trump administration could continue to deport individuals under other legal authorities.

The Trump administration claims it has been building a "productive working relationship" with South Sudan to take in deported immigrants, though some officials in the country have expressed concerns over taking in migrants with criminal records.

In April, Secretary of State Marco Rubio said his agency was revoking visas for South Sudanese passport holders over the country's alleged refusal to repatriate its deported citizens.

The Supreme Court could rule on the government's request at any time.

However, if the judge learns that the intern was personally involved with a matter at the law firm, the intern's insulation from that particular matter cannot be waived or remitted (cf. Digest: A judge may contact another court and request a copy of charges pending against a defendant who is being arraigned before the judge, if the judge has learned in the course of their official judicial duties that there are such charges pending in another court and the nature of such charges may bear on the judge's bail decision.

Rules: Judiciary Law 212(2)(l); 22 NYCRR 22 NYCRR Part 100, Preamble; 100.0(S); 100.1; 100.2; 100.2(A); Opinions 21-145; 15-85.

Opinion: A town justice states that, in cases where a defendant before him/her has been charged with petit larceny and assault, the defendant's Division of Criminal Justice Services (DCJS) report often reveals "similar charges pending against the defendant in another court." The judge states that the specific circumstances underlying such charges may legally bear on the judge's bail decision (see e.g. Criminal Procedure Law § 510.10[4][t]). Accordingly, the judge asks if it is ethically permissible to contact the other court and request a copy of charges pending there against a defendant being arraigned before the judge, given that the judge has learned of these charges in the course of official judicial duties.

A judge must always avoid even the appearance of impropriety (see 22 NYCRR 100.2), act in a manner that promotes public confidence in the judiciary's integrity and impartiality (see 22 NYCRR 100.2[A]), and uphold the judiciary's independence (see 22 NYCRR 100.1; see also 22 NYCRR 100.0[S] ["An 'independent' judiciary is one free of outside influences or control"]).

We have emphasized that "[j]udges must scrupulously maintain their independence from prosecutors and law enforcement" and be "extremely careful not to abandon their neutral judicial role for an investigative or enforcement one" (Opinions 21-145 [citations omitted]). Still, "[w]hile judges must avoid even the appearance of serving as investigators, advocates, prosecutors, or law enforcement, they need not turn a blind eye to information they have become aware of in their judicial capacity" (id.).

Along these lines, we have advised that a judge may review a defendant's electronic driver's abstract before accepting or rejecting a proposed plea agreement in a Vehicle and Traffic Law matter (see Opinion 15-85). We have also advised that a judge may contact another court and request a defendant's address as information of public record where the judge is properly considering whether to issue a bench warrant and the judge has learned in the course of the judge's official judicial duties that the other court may have the defendant's current address (see Opinion 21-145).

Here, the judge's review of the DCJS report is plainly within their official judicial duties. Thus, it is ethically permissible for the judge to use information learned from the report as the basis for a subsequent "request [for] information of public record," so long as the request is founded upon "a good-faith legal determination concerning the lawfulness of" considering that information in the bail decision (id.; see also Opinion 15-85 [from an ethical perspective, review of driver's abstract is not an impermissible ex parte communication]).

Finally, we cannot comment on the propriety of the inquiring judge's analysis of the Criminal Procedure Law or other legal matters (see Judiciary Law § 212[2][l]; cf. Opinion 21-145 [inquiring judge must make a "good-faith legal determination" about the lawfulness of the proposed activity]).

Expert Analysis / Disciplinary Proceeding

Pricing

avoid added burdens on working- and middle-class families."

Two weeks later, after concluding that this abrupt reversal did not moot out the cases before him, Judge Liman issued a thorough ruling rejecting the NEPA claims. Mulgrew v. Unted States Department of Transportation, 750 F.Supp.3d 171 (S.D.N.Y. 2024).

Most significantly for purposes of this discussion, he examined the claim that the federal government had failed to sufficiently consider the impact of traffic diverted from the tolling zone to minority communities.

The construction of highways through minority neighborhoods has had devastating consequences, so the concerns about traffic displaced by the tolling zone deserved serious study, with advocates having been particularly concerned about additional truck traffic on the Cross Bronx Expressway in neighborhoods with high asthma rates.

As Liman noted, however, the federal government did study the environmental-justice impacts of congestion pricing, with its final report expressly focusing on the harmful effects of vehicle emissions on minority neighborhoods.

The extent to which traffic displacement would in fact occur has been contested – and the most recent data show little such displacement – but the federal government did require New York to adopt mitigation measures to address possible displacement.

For Liman, the government had readily satisfied NEPA's procedural requirements: "Far from arbitrary disregard, the improvements to the [environmental justice] analysis displayed both careful consideration and a deep commitment . . . not to repeat the dismal chapters of New York City's transportation history."

> Eighty percent of toll revenue is dedicated to capital projects within New York City (including improvements to the MTA's subway and bus service), while the remaining twenty percent is evenly divided between capital projects for the Long Island Railroad and Metro-North Railroad.

Constitutional Claims and More Politics

With the NEPA procedural claims addressed, the cases before Judge Liman moved on to the federal and state constitutional claims, with defendants filing motions to dismiss last September and the plaintiffs moving for a preliminary injunction in late November. As those motions were proceeding, two major political developments occurred.

First, Donald Trump, who during his campaign had vowed to kill congestion pricing, was elected President. Then, ten days after the election Governor Hochul announced an end to her June "pause" of the program (a pause widely believed to have been instituted to help Democratic candidates running for congressional seats in New York suburban areas where congestion pricing was deeply unpopular). Hochul also announced the primary toll would be reduced to $9.

With the stage set for a political brawl between New York and the incoming Trump Administration and with congestion pricing scheduled to start on Jan. 5, Liman on Dec. 23 – just three days after oral argument – issued another thorough opinion and denied the challengers' preliminary-injunction motions. Chan v. United States Department of Transportation, 2024 WL 5199945 (S.D.N.Y., Dec. 23, 2024). In that ruling, he rejected the plaintiffs' constitutional claims.

The two civil-rights constitutional claims the plaintiffs pressed were that the tolls violated the federal "right to travel" and violated New York's newly enacted "Green Amendment." The right to travel is one that courts have recognized under the Fifth Amendment to bar excessive burdens on inter- and intra-state travel and most notably has been used to challenge curfews.

It also has generated a cottage industry of challenges to roadway tolls. These have fared poorly in the Second Circuit and elsewhere, and Judge Liman had little trouble dispensing with them:

"Plaintiffs do not adduce any evidence that they will be unable to travel and instead show that the Tolling Program represents, at most, a minor burden on the right to travel. Plaintiffs therefore have not shown a likelihood of success on the merits with respect to their claims that the Tolling Program runs afoul of the right to travel."

As for the Green Amendment, this is an important recent addition to the New York Constitution. Effective Jan. 1, 2022, it provides that "[e]ach person shall have a right to clean air and water, and a healthful environment." N.Y. Const. Art. I, §19.

As Liman noted, little case-law exists so far interpreting the amendment. Unfortunately, he chose to wade into this state-law issue and took the position that the amendment adds no new rights: "The court joins in [other] courts' hesitance to read the Green Amendment as creating a self-executing substantive right that imposes environmental standards above and beyond the state's preexisting—and robust—environmental regulatory regime."

And with that, congestion pricing started on Jan. 5.

A Regal Federal Flip and Embarrassing DOJ Gaffe

Unsurprisingly, not long after Trump's inauguration the federal government reversed its position on congestion pricing, though its announcement marked a new frontier. On Feb. 19 a Trump Truth Social posting featured an image resembling the cover of Time Magazine with Trump wearing a crown and the New York City skyline in the background.

The accompanying text read, "CONGESTION PRICING IS DEAD. Manhattan, and all of New York, is SAVED. LONG LIVE THE KING!" That same day, Transportation Secretary Sean Duffy sent a letter to Governor Hochul purporting to terminate federal authorization for the program.

Hochul promptly and aggressively announced that New York had no intention of halting congestion pricing, and the MTA immediately filed its own lawsuit against the re-aligned federal government, and that case also was assigned to Liman.

Duffy then loudly announced a series of deadlines by which New York had to end the program and upped the stakes by threatening to withdraw most federal transportation funding from New York if it did not do so, even with the litigation pending. New York ignored each deadline, only to have Duffy cartoonishly set another one.

Finally, those funding threats prompted Liman last week, on May 27, to enter a temporary restraining order barring any cut-off. And the following day, he issued a 60-page decision granting a preliminary injunction against the federal effort to withdraw its approval, finding it likely violated the Administrative Procedure Act. Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Duffy, 2025 WL 1513369 (S.D.N.Y., May 28, 2025).

In his preliminary-injunction decision Judge Liman noted that the Trump Administration had abandoned certain arguments made in Secretary Duffy's Feb. 19 letter announcing the federal reversal.

This was no surprise in light of an extraordinary DOJ gaffe. On April 23, the department uploaded to the case docket a letter from DOJ trial counsel to a Transportation Department attorney discussing the merits of the arguments in Duffy's letter and explaining why those arguments lacked merit.

Though Judge Liman has ruled that the letter cannot be used in the litigation and though little in the letter went beyond what the MTA already was arguing, the letter's public release was yet another remarkable development in a controversy marked by remarkable developments.

Looking Forward

With every month that goes by, data show that congestion pricing is decreasing vehicle traffic in lower Manhattan, generating substantial revenue for mass transit (on target for $500 million this year), decreasing travel time for those driving into and through lower Manhattan (including commuter buses and emergency vehicles), and improving pedestrian safety in the tolling zone.

At the same time, congestion pricing does not appear to be generating the feared spillover effects, including jammed parking at the border of the toll zone and significant additional traffic on alternate routes.

And as the program has rolled out, public support has grown consistently, with the most recent polling showing that the level of approval nearly matches the level of disapproval, a dramatic shift from lopsided public opposition just before the program started in January.

To be sure, these considerations do not bear directly on the legal claims, which await final rulings. But with the series of court losses the Trump Administration has suffered, one wonders if the emerging picture of widespread benefits and growing public support might prompt the federal government to turn its attention to other matters.

Matter of Osterbye

tion and training in handling documents but insists his delay was not willful. Moreover, he asserts that he was not disciplined for defrauding or otherwise harming clients. With respect to his failure to timely inform AGC about his public reprimands, respondent states that he did not know that he needed to inform AGC "of every single allegation." He further states that he notified AGC of his suspension in August 2024 and that if he had received a meaningful response, he "would have fully divulged all past cases." He also notes that had he been asked to list his previous reprimands, he would have done so. As to the proposed sanction, he argues that his New Jersey suspension is punishment enough and a severe hardship in that his sole source of income comes from the supervised temporary legal work he currently performs. Respondent proposes not to practice any law in New York outside of said legal work while he is suspended in New Jersey and argues that the motion should be held in abeyance for a year until he can regain his New Jersey license.

AGC argues that an upward departure to a one-year suspension is appropriate in this matter. AGC points to respondent's two prior public reprimands of which respondent never apprised AGC or the Court, and his prior suspension in New York. AGC further argues that respondent minimizes his conduct and fails to acknowledge that from 2016 until his suspension in 2024, he "evaded, disregarded, and misled the OAE in its efforts to investigate respondent's unethical conduct and disregarded NJ court orders." AGC further argues that respondent blames AGC and/or this Court for not asking him about his prior disciplinary sanctions.

The Court's general rule is that "significant weight should be given to the sanction imposed by the jurisdiction where the misconduct occurred because the foreign jurisdiction has the greatest interest in fashioning sanctions for misconduct" (Matter of Blumenthal, 165 AD3d 85, 86 [1st Dept 2018]; Matter of Jaffe, 78 AD3d 152, 158 [1st Dept 2010]), and only in rare instances will this Court depart from its general rule (Matter of McHallam, 160 AD3d 89, 92 [1st Dept 2018]; Matter of Lowell, 14 AD3d 41 [1st Dept 2004], appeal dismissed 4 NY3d 846 [2005], lv denied 5 NY3d 708 [2005]).

Although the NJ Court imposed a six-month suspension, an upward departure to one year is the appropriate discipline in this matter. In addition to the aggravating factors considered by OAE in making its recommendation to DRB, respondent twice failed to report his prior reprimands as required by 22 NYCRR 1240.13(d) and, as a result, those reprimands were never the subject of reciprocal disciplinary action in New York.

This Court has directed greater sanctions than those imposed by the other state where an attorney fails to timely notify AGC of discipline in a foreign jurisdiction. In Matter of Gilbert (268 AD2d 67 [1st Dept 2000]), this Court imposed a greater sanction in a reciprocal discipline proceeding in light of the attorney's failure to report a prior New Jersey reprimand. Specifically, after issuing a reprimand in 1996, the NJ Court suspended Gilbert for three months in 1999 for failure to return third-party funds and wrongfully placing a lien on third-party funds. In imposing a six-month suspension, this Court noted that "[w]hile a reciprocal sanction is usually imposed, it would be inappropriate under the circumstances of this case in view of respondent's failure to notify New York of his New Jersey reprimand in violation of 22 NYCRR 603.3(d).[1] A longer suspension is further warranted because the New Jersey reprimand was never subject to reciprocal disciplinary action in this State" (id. at 70). The same rationale applies here.

Accordingly, AGC's motion for reciprocal discipline should be granted and respondent suspended for a period of one year, effective 30 days from the date of the order, and until further order of this Court. Respondent's informal request for an agreement delaying the imposition of discipline until he is reinstated in New Jersey should be denied.

All concur.

1. The reporting requirement of 22 NYCRR §603.3(d) is now codified as 22 NYCRR §1240.13(d).
