DECISIONS OF INTEREST

APP. DIV. | PERSONAL INJURY

Prior Assault Allegations Do Not Transform Later Encounter Into Forcible Touching Claim

The appellate court dismissed Adult Survivors Act claims against costume designer William Ivey Long, concluding plaintiff failed to allege conduct constituting forcible touching under New York law. Plaintiff alleged Long had sexually assaulted him years earlier while the two worked together at a theater organization and later encountered him in 2008 at a costume shop, where Long allegedly grabbed his shoulders, touched his cheeks, moved close to his face and made comments referencing his appearance and puberty. Plaintiff argued the prior history between the parties transformed the later encounter into forcible touching and supported claims revived under the Adult Survivors Act. The court rejected that argument, finding the alleged touching of plaintiff's shoulders and cheeks did not involve sexual or intimate body parts within the meaning of the statute and that prior allegations of sexual abuse could not alter the legal definition of intimate touching. The court further found that unlike prior cases involving contemporaneous sexualized conduct, the allegations lacked circumstances making the physical contact sufficiently sexual or intimate.

Eviction Warrant Issued Against Occupants With No Legal Basis to Remain in Estate Property

The Surrogate Court of Manhattan addressed a petition by the preliminary executor of the decedent's estate seeking eviction of occupants and approval to sell estate property. The executor, Arvin G. Amatorio, alleged that a building on West 153rd Street was an estate asset and that certain occupants remained without legal right and were not paying rent. The court held that the building belonged to the estate and that the executor was entitled to possession of all apartments therein, warranting eviction of the occupants within the building. The Surrogate's Court determined that respondents failed to provide any legal basis for continued occupancy and that no opposition to the proposed sale had been raised by them or anyone else. The court ordered eviction and issuance of a warrant of ejection, directing occupants to vacate by a specified date. It also approved the sale of the property, finding such relief in the estate's best interests given a pending foreclosure and lack of rental income from any parties. The petition was granted in full, with directions for execution and compliance.

DOH Granted Subpoena Seeking Records From Alleged Unlicensed Home Care Operators

The New York State Department of Health (DOH) petitioned to compel Friends for Life Geriatric Services and related entities to comply with an administrative subpoena issued during an investigation into whether respondents were operating an unlicensed home care services agency. Respondents cross-moved to quash the subpoena, arguing DOH lacked authority, had no factual basis and was harassing a non-medical companion and consulting business. The court held Public Health Law §206(4)(a) permits DOH to subpoena records only in a matter or proceeding before the commissioner, but construed "matter" broadly to include a subject under DOH consideration. It further held DOH may investigate unlicensed entities under Article 36 if it has objective, specific and credible facts suggesting they may be required to hold a license. Although DOH's proof was thin, website representations, advertisements, service descriptions, testimonials and a tort claim marginally supplied a sufficient factual predicate. Finding no proof of bad faith or overbreadth, the court granted DOH's motion to compel compliance and denied respondents' cross-motion to quash.

U.S. - SDNY | DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Court Compels Arbitration, as Credit Reporting Claims Arise From Vehicle Lease Agreement

The court compelled arbitration of a Fair Credit Reporting Act suit against Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., finding that the plaintiff's credit reporting claims were sufficiently tied to the underlying vehicle lease agreement and fell within a broad arbitration provision. Plaintiff alleged Nissan improperly continued reporting the full balance of a leased vehicle obligation after the car was impounded or repossessed and sold, despite disputes over the reporting. The court rejected arguments that Nissan lacked authority to enforce the arbitration clause because it was not a signatory to the lease, concluding that the agreement expressly contemplated Nissan's role and assignment rights. The court also found that the plaintiff's claims arose from the lease because determining the accuracy of the reporting required interpreting payment obligations and remaining debt under the contract. In addition, the court noted that the lease expressly delegated gateway questions of arbitrability to the arbitrator and broadly covered statutory claims arising from the parties' relationship, leading the court to stay the litigation pending arbitration.

Candidate's Petition Deemed Properly Verified Despite Absence of CPLR 2106 Language

Petitioner Suzanne Jacobson commenced an Election Law proceeding seeking to invalidate the designating petition of respondent Micah Bergdale for the Democratic primary for representative in Congress, 12th Congressional District, alleging invalid signatures and later asserting residency issues. Bergdale answered and cross-moved to dismiss, arguing the petition was jurisdictionally defective because it was not properly verified under Election Law § 16-116, asserting the verification failed to comply with CPLR 2106 and was therefore a nullity. The court denied the cross-motion. It held that Election Law § 16-116 requires a verified petition, but Jacobson satisfied that requirement through a notarized affidavit verification. The court reasoned that CPLR 2106 governs affirmations and permits their use in lieu of affidavits, but does not eliminate or mandate affirmations over affidavits. The court concluded that a traditional affidavit, properly sworn before a notary, remains valid. The notary's jurat created a presumption of a proper oath. Accordingly, Jacobson's verification was valid, and the proceeding may continue.

Tenant's Dismissal Adjourned, Counsel's Affirmation Noncompliant With CPLR 2106

Plaintiff Hoffman & Hoffman LLC commenced an action in 2023 seeking to recover rent and/or use and occupancy from defendant Zamari Smith for an apartment in Brooklyn. Defendant moved pursuant to CPLR 3211 and CPLR 3212 to dismiss or for summary judgment, or alternatively for an extension of time and counsel sought to withdraw. Plaintiff cross-moved under Real Property Law § 220 for use and occupancy from December 2018 through January 2026 and pendente lite payments. The court held that defendant's motion was procedurally defective and could not be decided on the merits because counsel's supporting affirmation failed to comply with CPLR 2106, rendering the motion unsupported and summary judgment was also premature given unresolved counterclaims. The court held that counsel's motion to withdraw was defective for the same reason and did not create a stay. Rather than granting relief, the court adjourned motions and permitted refiling of papers. The court directed further briefing on plaintiff's unopposed use and occupancy cross motion and set a schedule for renewed submissions and argument.

SECOND CIRCUIT | CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Retroactive Mortgage Law Changes Did Not Violate Banks' Constitutional Rights

The panel upheld retroactive application of New York's Foreclosure Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA), concluding that applying the law to previously filed foreclosure actions did not violate due process, the Contracts Clause or the Takings Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The dispute arose after a junior mortgage holder sought to cancel a senior mortgage as time-barred, arguing that a 2007 foreclosure action had accelerated the debt and triggered New York's six-year limitations period. After New York enacted FAPA in 2022, the law barred mortgage holders from later arguing that prior accelerations were invalid absent an express judicial determination. The panel rejected U.S. Bank's constitutional challenges, finding the bank had no deeply rooted or vested right to wait until after the statute of limitations expired to collaterally attack an earlier foreclosure action. The court further found that any loss of foreclosure rights stemmed from the bank's own inaction rather than from FAPA itself. It also held that the legislation rationally addressed perceived abuses in foreclosure litigation and efforts to manipulate statutes of limitations following the mortgage crisis.

U.S. - EDNY | EMPLOYMENT LITIGATION

Founder's Stock Option Claim to Proceed; Medical Leave Does Not End Equity Rights

The court allowed a former startup co-founder's breach of contract claim to proceed against a medical technology company, as he plausibly alleged the company improperly refused to honor his stock option rights. Plaintiff, the company's former chief technology officer and co-founder, claimed he spent years developing the startup's core technology while receiving no salary and relying on promises of future compensation. After suffering a stroke and later returning to work part time, he alleged the company refused efforts to exercise an option to purchase company shares valued at over $1 million. The court rejected defendants' argument that the option automatically expired during plaintiff's medical absence, finding the agreement addressed voluntary termination and permanent disability but did not clearly cover a temporary health-related interruption in employment. Further, plaintiff plausibly alleged he remained employed and complied with the option agreement's exercise requirements. However, the court dismissed claims based on alleged oral promises of annual salary payments and expense reimbursements, as the alleged promises lacked sufficiently definite terms.

Tenant's Absence to Care for Friend Raises Triable Issue in Primary Residence Case

Petitioner Curragh Realty, LLC brought a hold-over proceeding alleging respondent-tenant Carolyn Forbes, a rent-controlled tenant, did not maintain the subject apartment as her primary residence. Petitioner moved for summary judgment or to dismiss respondent's defenses and counterclaims—citing deposition testimony that respondent had lived at a friend's apartment to act as her caregiver since at least 2019—for alleged clutter, lack of electricity and absence of basic household items. Respondent opposed, arguing triable issues existed over the reasons for her absence, including whether building and apartment conditions attributable to petitioner justified temporary relocation, and whether caregiving for a nontraditional family member could excuse absence. The court held summary judgment was inappropriate because primary-residence disputes ordinarily require trial, conflicting factual assertions, and credibility issues remained and respondent's Braschi-inspired caregiving theory was at least reasonable and triable. The court also declined to strike defenses or counterclaims, including attorney's fees, finding petitioner failed to show they lacked merit.

Matching-Funds Denial Vacated Where PCFB Failed to Notify Ticket of Incomplete Filing

Petitioners Bruce A. Blakeman, Republican candidate for governor, and Todd Hood, candidate for lieutenant governor, brought a hybrid CPLR Article 78 and declaratory judgment proceeding challenging the Public Campaign Finance Board's March 31, 2026 determination that their joint candidacy was ineligible for public matching funds. Hood had not filed a PCF-21, PCF-22 or other certification by the February 23 deadline, although Blakeman had registered, certified compliance, attended mandatory training and filed amended forms after the joint-ticket regulations became effective. The court rejected petitioners' claims that the Board lacked authority to determine ineligibility holding lieutenant governor candidates must certify personal compliance. However, the court held the Board acted arbitrarily and contrary to law by failing to follow its own cure regulation. Because joint gubernatorial tickets are treated as a single candidate, Blakeman's filings were incomplete, requiring a one-week cure opportunity. The court denied dismissal, granted the petition, vacated ineligibility, and ordered a cure period for participation in the public campaign financing program.

Maxim Injunction Denied; Delay Undercut Claims Of Urgent Harm in Playboy Contest Dispute

The court denied Maxim Inc.'s request for a preliminary injunction against Playboy in a dispute alleging Playboy copied the mechanics and structure of Maxim's modeling competition for its "Great Playmate Search." Maxim asserted trade secret, copyright, contract and unfair competition claims, alleging Playboy replicated features such as voting systems, tournament structures and user-generated content mechanisms. The court found Maxim failed to show irreparable harm, as Maxim waited months after learning of Playboy's competition to seek emergency relief and, during that period, pursued a potential business partnership rather than objecting to alleged infringement. The court noted that Maxim's own communications praised the contest's revenue potential and proposed future collaboration. The court also found Maxim was unlikely to succeed on the merits because many of the alleged trade secrets were publicly disclosed through competition rules, the claimed contest mechanics largely reflected unprotectable ideas rather than protected expression, and Maxim failed to show Playboy agreed to contractual restrictions or improperly acquired confidential information.
